Illinois Institute of Technology has won awards in two major nationwide competitions on mechanical engineering problems. The separate competitions were sponsored by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation. The awards, presented to four Illinois Institute of Technology students, were announced in this past Spring with projects resulting from MAAE 411, "Design of Systems." In the course, Chicago area companies in industry submit design projects for the students, usually seniors.

This week's ATS meeting was held Tuesday, September 28, at 12:45, with Mike Lomax presiding. New business discussed included: the possibility of moving the WP (will pass) deadline up to the 14th week of classes; tabling a proposal of an informal system of student opinion on the subject; the passing of a motion to see that the administration of nine flu shots on campus; the passing of a motion to appoint Jim Glaze as Assistant Representative to the Illinois Advisory Board of Higher Education. Old business consisted of committee reports on the following matters: petition valuations to be finished by the next meeting; the ordering of new codes for the Bog; the scheduling of the dates for elections for class officers; Representative and Assistant Treasurer for September 26, 17 and 18; and the distribution during the next two weeks of the ATS Assembly of informal surveys on the extension of library hours; a meeting with the Provost concerning the Dean's List; and the end of the Fall Semester was officially set for December 18.

Last week's meeting of September 21 passed a motion to approve the constitution of the Student Senate, and it was decided that Mike Lomax would publicize a summary of the activities for the recent meeting of the Student Senate. Such competitions a year, the problem up till now has been that the individual members of the faculty have not pushed or encouraged their students to look into them. It's unlike a professor that it is the faculty's responsibility to bring the competitions to the attention of the students. It is also necessary, in his eyes, to incorporate useful projects (which could be future award winners) into the coursework. Then the student would have the assistance and knowledge of an experienced engineer and the challenge of real life engineering. This, Willis feels, accomplishes the same thing as work-study in the field.

More Active Role for Improved ATS

Recent ATS meetings are a big change from the semester's original three rep delegation.

Advocacy Board of Illinois. Last week's old business included an inquiry into the possibility of wine in the Bog. The administration is supposedly now working on this question.

II/IT V Meets Anxiously Awaiting World

President Martin, as praised by Dr. Peter Lyskos, is the main responsible for II/IT's live educational/broadcast system II/IT V. Each of the above, along with Dean Salazar, held a press conference yesterday which was attended by representatives of each of Chicago's important newspapers.

Martin began the conference by briefly summarizing II/IT V's evolution. The idea was first adopted through the impetus of President Martin during his Deanship at the Universities of Florida's College of Engineering. He transferred, later to Southern Methodist University and there too, he established the "talk back" television lecture program. The program inducted in Florida, and later in Texas was the first of its kind; whereby students, using microphones installed at the reception

Dorm Election Snarled

Amid increasing confusion and controversy, the executive board of II/IT's Interstudent Council was elected last night. Claims of illegal procedure and lack of communication among the vote have raised numerous questions about the validity of the results. The case board, chosen by each resident association's two IRC representatives, now consists of President Valerie Caliendo, a junior transfer student, a sophomore with a social and financial aid. The result, decided with both a quorum present, leaves a bad taste in the mouths of many students. John Bollwinkel, a sophomore from the south side, and Tom Reilly, a sophomore from the north side, were the only two candidates for president. Yet, with the election now settled, students are concerned about the lack of representation for the entire student body.

There's only one more week to register for a team for the 8th Annual IIT Interfraternity Trike Race. Starting positions will be awarded according to the order of receipt of the registration forms. Registration forms and the entry fee, $2.00, can be found at the IIT Activity Director's office in 16 South Hall. The registration deadline is for practice at 10 a.m. on Thursday, October 7. More than 100 entries are expected for this event, so register early to avoid disappointment.

In case you haven't heard, Spring Thing is coming. This year's Spring Thing (the 10th Annual) is a special event for new students and alumni. The event will be held on Saturday, April 16, at the Big Apple. Tickets are available at the door for $5 each. The event will feature live music, food, and entertainment throughout the night. Don't miss out on this fun-filled event!

The festivities continue on Thursday, October 1st, at 7 p.m. on the campus green. A special evening of entertainment will be held in honor of the 10th anniversary of the IIT Alumni Association. Live music, food, and drinks will be available throughout the evening. Make sure to mark your calendars for this exciting event.

AFROTC Scholarship Winners

Lt. Col. Jensen, of the Aerospace Science Department, today announced Air Force approval of more than $75,000 in engineering scholarships for AFROTC students.

The Air Force awarded four year scholarships to John Menzen, Bruce Ostrander, and Michael Novak. The scholarships provide tuition, books, and a $2,500 living allowance.

In addition, two semesters of a degree in military science are required to receive the scholarship.

Good Advice for Freshmen

by Ken Knepper

According to the IT Bulletin, the reputation of the freshman advisor is “counseling (the new student) on academic and personal problems.” The advisor may also refer the student to other sources for further help. But beyond the official definition, the advisor provides a personal touch to the freshman experience and the sometimes impersonal environment of the university.

Currently there are two fresh- men advisors at the Dean of Students Office (as opposed to two last year’s). Scott Cooper and Marc F. Powell received their bachelor’s degrees in chemical engineering at IIT. Scott Cooper is an advisor to the freshmen in the College of Engineering and the College of Law, and Marc F. Powell is an advisor to the freshmen in the College of Social Science.

At the present time, the staff is calling students in random order from the freshmen advisor group. A program is scheduled to be run to contact the students on a regular basis. This would provide a more efficient way to reach the students on a regular basis.

The program of freshmen advisors is a new concept in the College of Engineering. The advisor group is a new concept in the College of Social Science. The advisor group is a new concept in the College of Liberal Arts.

The College of Liberal Arts has been moved from the College of Engineering to the College of Social Science. The advisor group is a new concept in the College of Social Science.

Job Hunt Seminar

The IIT Alumni Association will sponsor a joint meeting with the MBA Association of IIT. The meeting will be held on October 1st. The seminar will feature guest speakers discussing the job search process and strategies for successful job hunting.

Further information and registration details can be obtained at the IIT Alumni Association office, 147 South Hall, or by calling (312) 567-8900.
On "gutter language"

The issue of the use in Technology News of what has been termed "gutter language" has arisen. First the position of the newspaper in the campus activities spectrum should be indicated. Technology News is supported by a combination of student tuition monies and advertising revenues. Although it is ultimately owned by the administration, it is not by any means a direct organ of the administration; the newspaper exists to serve the students.

As a newspaper, TN's primary purpose is coverage of news events. But possibly a clarification is needed here; the campus already has a news publication, the IIT News and Views, which can be considered the campus newspaper, in the sense that it covers the campus community as a whole, covering nothing but IIT happenings. But Technology News is the student newspaper. The difference is that the average student of IIT may have an entirely different range of interests than the average campus community member. While the News and Views reader may be content to sit and sip warm milk, the TN reader may want to read "raucy" beer stories.

As a student publication designed to serve student interests within a weekly publication framework, TN thus considers the printing of various general interest items a definite part of its duty, witness the features page, the wine stories of past years, the beer stories of today, the semesters News and Views. The work contained in such items may be considered vulgar to those of a more prudish nature; however, prevalence for the use of these assorted slang words is a known fact. The word "bullshit" has even been used on television. In modern communication such expressions are often a very effective means of communicating an emphatic point.

While Technology News has established editorial guidelines for the way news should be written, these guidelines do not extend to the subjective areas of the paper, for obvious reasons; unnecessary flaunting of creativity will produce dull and unremarkable results in these areas.

It should be noted that any privately authored articles (i.e., anything other than news, editorial and announcements) do not represent the voice of Technology News but must be considered the personal opinions of the authors involved. The presence of an article in the paper signifies only that it was deemed worthy of publication by editorial judgment, if but for general interest or entertainment value or both. If indeed students actually do object in a majority to the contents of the newspaper, there are, of course, democratic channels for doing something about it, in fact, doing everything about it.

All these arguments do not diminish the possibility that the "gutter language" has bad advertising for the school, and may indeed prove harmful to the school's campaign. A campus newspaper might be shocked and offended by the appearance of what is commonly considered vulgar in an unexpected spot. The same person might be unfortunate enough to turn to channel 11 on Sunday night at ten o'clock, expecting to watch TV news and find a sexual network program, and be horrified at the sudden appearance of nudity and transvestism on the screen. Technology News has decided to, like channel 11, issue periodically an editorial article a "warning" of the article's potentially offensive content. That no one who does not want to read such an item can be accidentally injured by it.

Although gross vulgarities are generally abstained from by Technology News(with the possible exception of FSN & B), it cannot be promised that objectionable slang and figures of speech will not appear, especially in the context of features or general interest items.

Dear Editor:

I want to protest the increasingly frequent use of "gutter language" in Technology News. It is bad enough in your "Letters to the Editor." It is in juvenile bad taste in the article by Joe Martino, and it is unacceptable in an editorial. In recent years past, I have been proud to send Technology News to trustees, donors, and other friends of the institution. This year the particularly last two issues have not been something I care to send to friends of IIT.

I should also add that the front page, with the exception of the recent economy story has been uniformly well done. The Dr. Quastor column is superior by any test. The sports stories have been well done. It is a shame that such excellent work is tarnished by the poor quality of writing noted in the first paragraph.

I hope that you will bend your efforts to make Technology News the kind of newspaper that students can view with pride and that all of us can send to alumini, parents, and friends whose support is essential if IIT is to remain financially, the student body desperately needs it.

Sincerely yours,

Thomas L. Martin, Jr.
President

Role model?

Dear Editor:

Yesterday I went to the Bog to have a beer at 4:15 and found that the Bog was not open yet. The cause was apparent to anyone who had been in the Bog Wed. night when, at a total mess was made of the Bog by overzealous students. The Bog was supposed to open at 5 o'clock, surprise, though, when in the absence of students waiting arbitrarily for the Bog to open, I find the director of the HUB (now known as The Bog) lying on some suits. This usurpation of power by persons in positions of authority is one of the prime reasons for the lack of confidence which growing people now feel toward all authority. If you can persuade people to learn students to take responsibility with this sort of example? If student leaders were to abuse their positions in this manner, they would probably be given a reprimand, if not expelled from school. Why should students have to show responsibility when their role is shown and not?
The cause was to anyone who had the bug on Wednesday, when a total of 12 inductees were inducted, by their classmates. Imagine my surprise, when in the course of the ceremony, I found myself sitting next to the director of the HUB, a man I didn't even know was there. His level of power was such that he was in the prime of his career, and yet he seemed to feel oddly out of place. How can people who are so close to the core of their profession feel so distant from their colleagues? I guess I should have been more sensitive to the situation, but I didn't have the time to consider it. Anyway, the ceremony went on, and I found myself wondering how the students felt about being inducted, and what it meant to them. The HUB, after all, is a central part of the campus, and it's not every day that you get to be inducted into it. So there you are. My initial suppositions were confirmed. A more dedicated, ambitious, goal-oriented student body would be hard to find.

By Kevin Donahoe

What's that you say? The scholarship board didn't recognize your talents and therefore didn't give you enough money for the school? Well, you do have an alternative, maybe. You could be hired by the school.

If students get a first shot at any jobs on campus, can there be a more desirable situation? I mean, you have the rest of your life to worry about. Why should I have to think about my job while I'm in college? Why should I have to worry about my future while I'm still young? It's not fair to me, and it's not fair to the students.

Since I'm a non-profit organization, the government gives me the right to pay subminimum wages. Recently, though, the lower end of the pay scale has been raised from $1.00 an hour to $2.00 an hour. A student may work a maximum of 20 hours a week during the school year. During semester breaks and summer vacation, the possibility is extended to 8 hours a day or 40 hours a week. A student also is allowed to work for only one campus employer.

Another alternative is the work study program. There aren't many chances there any more, either. But if you meet the qualifications, you would be preferred. To investigate this opportunity, you should contact the director of the Hanna-Aid Scholarship Fund, in Main Building.

The colorful and powerful personality of Sherlock Holmes makes for a fascinating multimedia lecture, presented by one of the world's leading authorities on Sherlock Holmes and detective fiction. Mr. Penzler explains to you on a journey through Holmes' life, exploring methods of deduction, humorous anecdotes, and colorful narratives of his most memorable cases. Mr. Penzler discusses such characters as Dr. Watson, Professor Moriarty, the Baker Street irregulars, and the many portrayals of Holmes. He looks at Holmes' eclectic taste in music, foods, literature, phil-

Expression

by Joe Chast

The editor-in-chief and I, after a couple of weeks past, briefly defined a point enclosed within the subject of contemporary speech: a point which predates aesthetics currently, and thus provides a ground from which one may evaluate today's surrealism. The subject is modern speech, and the sentences and phrases, their types, their origins, and their contexts can be insightfully used to determine the nature of ubiquitous social beliefs and values. The emphasis, for instance, which is placed on the value of a speech is, to an attention-paying individual, to what the speaker wants or acknowledges, sometimes more lucidly than his words themselves. The theme is how something is said, and so forth do not exist to substantiate this theme, but to simply acknowledge presence. One could reduce, then, that if many individuals have in mind the same society, there are no differences between the same society with people talking in the same society, that value, moreover, social Cross Country Cruises
by Joe Hughes

ITT’s cross country team placed second in a field of nine teams in the Ray Schellhase Invitational, held September 24 at Northeastern Illinois University. The meet was won by St. Xavier with a total of 59 points. The Hawks placed four runners in the top 25 and accumulated a score of 97 points. Third place went to Olivet Nazarene, a team that defeated ITT four times last year, 26 points behind ITT.

Freshman Brad Kourey led both the Hawk runners with a time of 21:32 for the four-mile course. Kourey’s time placed him fourth overall and won him an individual trophy.

The second runner to finish for ITT was sophomore Jimmy Eng, in 14th place overall. Eng was one of the outstanding performers on last year’s cross country team.

Brian Jarzombowski was the third Hawk across the finish line. He had a time of 22:34, one of his best races ever, finishing 18th.

by Joe Hughes

After three quadrangular meets, ITT’s golf team has a record of 6-3-1, placing them second, behind Northeastern Illinois University, in the Chicagoland Collegiate Golf Conference. The team is still in the running for the NGAI District 20 Championship.

The Hawk runners will be in action again tomorrow, when ITT competes in the Sports Inst. Invitational. 14 teams are entered, including host Aurora College and defending champion Illinois Benedictine.
