Spring Thing Here; UB Burst into Bloom

by Don McCallum

Today is your last chance to register a team for the 8th Annual IIT Intercollegiate Tennis Tourney. Teams consist of 4 to 12 riders and a pit crew of up to 8 members. The race is open to anyone and everyone, so get your team together before there is still time.

A lot of you, I know, are wondering why it costs to damn much to enter a lousy tricycle race. Well, those tricycles are expensive. In my case, it’s for a good cause. After my surviving tricycle and all unused tricycles will be donated to the “West Side Parents of Sherwood Children United”; a local organization concerned with helping retarded children as well as adults.

The place to be on Friday, October 15 will be the HUB Ballroom where UB will present the second round of the tourney. Music will be played by Steve on a local group. A cover charge of $2 will be requested. The featured drink at the HUB Auditorium next weekend will be "Uppin Saturday Night." Judging by reports and comments from people who have seen the movie, everyone will want to be there.

Welcome to Larry Blair, the new Union Board Area Director for Special Plans.

IDC Election Results Declared Legal

Last week’s Intermediary Council election was finally decided at an IDC meeting held Wednesday night. At the meeting, called by the newly “elected” administration (consisting of Valerie Cienado, president; Jamie Drapine, treasurer; and Phil Dittman, secretary), it was decided that the election was legal and that the results would stand as valid.

Making those assembled (the majority there solely on the election issue) wait until near the end of the meeting, the Council then heard Bruce Waldie’s official count of the previous week’s polling. It was his contention that since the meeting was not held before the actual occurrence, the election violated Article 6, Section 1 of the IDC Constitution. Section 6, Article 1 states “Regular meetings of IDC shall be held at least twice a calendar month, the date and hour to be set by IDC at the beginning of the term. The members of IDC shall be informed by the secretary of this date and hour of the meeting prior to each meeting.”

Another question that arose was the number of people named in attendance before such an event (the voting) could be initiated. Some felt the whole Council should have been in attendance in order that they would have at least had an option to vote. Others felt a simple majority or quorum was sufficient.

Since the former IDC President-Dean-Francis had called the meeting, it was maintained that the election was part of a “special meeting” and should have been subjected to the mandatory 24 hour rule. Cienado states, “some members were notified of the meeting 24 hours ahead of time.” Bill Novak, an IDC rep, was not told of the voting until the meeting began. He feels “the secretary or the president from last year should have called the meeting and presided over the elections.”

John Emhart, Assistant Dean of Students and Head R.A., believes the entire issue was due to confusion as to when elections would take place. He sees the whole incident has “served the purpose of pointing out that the present Constitution is unworkable.”

Placement Offers Job Hunters Helpful Hints

With the season nearing the halfway point, the Placement Office has begun gearing up for an anticipated rush of students seeking jobs - both those last minute December graduates looking for full time employment and those forthright-need-to-work-now students looking for part-time or even summer jobs.

The Placement Office, boasting an incredible 80% rate of success in placing IIT students (and nearly all of them in their field of study), works under the philosophy that “you want to help the students.” At the same time, we want to help them. The office works closely with the students to “put the ball in the court.”

With the job market being a tough one, the Placement Office has put together a list of helpful tips for students:

1. Network:
   - Reach out to alumni who may be able to provide job leads or insights.

2. Professional Development:
   - Attend career workshops and seminars to enhance your skills.

3. Tailored Cover Letters and Resumes:
   - Customize your applications for each position.

4. LinkedIn and Networking:
   - Utilize professional networking platforms to connect with potential employers.

5. Continuous Learning:
   - Keep your skills updated and relevant to the current job market.

With the challenge of success being greater this season, the Placement Office is committed to helping students navigate the job search process.

Transform Lecture - Integrate Woes Away

What do you do when growing up didn’t at all even sound like your parents daily life? Perhaps someone else’s. Your dream of having a great childhood then sound them out. Which is that reason that the Placement people shawn from from various sources. Many creative (within a limit of two pages). As with any good writing job, the student can read and what he has done should be about or the steps you need to take to achieve your goals. Continued on page 2.
Bumper Crop of Sculptures Fills HUB

Currently on exhibit in the Homerun Union Lobby is an exhibit of paintings by Joan M. Tannenbaun, and sculpture by John Kennedy. On display until the 31st of this month, the art can be viewed during regular office hours.

The paintings, "visual music," in Tannenbaun's words, follow the style of 20th Century painting known as "non-objective." Consisting mainly of regular patterns of shapes and form, and employing the use of variously impregnated color, the artist's vibrant and expressive mood is expressed as "third edge" art.

Captivating the eye are the bumper steel and broken cast sculptures by John Kennedy. It is indeed difficult to not notice the eight-foot eagle and the similarly sized steel that grace the arriving doors of the main lobby. The sculpture is made of automobile bumpers, oil drums, and smaller bumper and parts of cars, a rack, an armadillo, and a brace of deer.

As part of the exhibit in the lobby is a more realistic painting of a deer in a woodland setting, the deer, a duck, and a fox are visible, the deer's antlers are stylized as an effective matter.

Dear Editor:

Just a brief note to thank you for the very mature and thoughtful response to my letter to you concerning gull-billed terns in Technology News.

Sincerely yours,
Thomas L. Martin, Jr.
President

Dear Editor:

So this year we're going to have another "obscenity" controversy. One side trying to justify the use of "obscenity," the other condemning it, and Joe Chase bemuses the deterioration of the English language. Well, I agree with Joe but out of the phrases he referred to didn't contain"obscenities," and I don't know if language, as spoken by most people, was ever more than a small collection of currently used idioms.

I disagree strongly with President Martin and Tech News. I don't recognize the existence of "obscenity." It seems there are a whole set of social rules which are based on the premise that without these rules we'd all act like chimpanzees. Politeness, proper language, personal hygiene, etc. A surprising amount of these rules seem to be based on the denial of any physiological basis for our existence. Come on now, if we didn't all fuck or have sexual intercourse, if you please, how did we get here? And if we eat, we have to excrete (shit, etc.). These things happen, we all know it, and if people choose to discuss them, using whatever terminology they please, it's not going to shock me. Or thrill me.

But all of this really doesn't make any difference. As my generation gets older, the number of people who really don't care if you say fuck is increasing, and they're getting more powerful. Regardless of the physical and mental fifty year side fighting a rear guard. For the time being I'll keep my language, and my act, clean for them. Because I know which way things are going, so I can wait. In the meantime Dr. Martin, and the FC, can have their way as far as I'm concerned. Till the millenium comes.

Dear Editor:

Brothers and sisters! Let us go to war for this ring often and strong! Let children forever remember our struggle and continue in theiral! Let them know the names and revered the idea of those that led, fighting with each hour the not-ending struggle against moral backsliders, physical degenerates and individualists.

Again the demon has been found writhing amongst us. But again his weak-casques, splitting vitrations, have been stopped and into awrt taken thrown. For once again constant watch by those of strength and vision has seen the slime insinuating not around the good, nor working people in our institution, but in its very, brain and nerves, in its communications network, in this news weekly you read.

People! Who can we thank for removing the foul dictholism of our changing and gutter language? It is our great teacher and leader of typists, form-makers and oppressed bureaucrats of the whole world, our President Thomas L. Martin Jr. is the great teacher and leader in the continuing struggle of the International Bureaucratic revolution!

Dear Editor:

In response to your article regarding Mr. William Shafskoff and our new Director of Financial Aid, I regret to inform you that your reporting is extremely biased and greatly inaccurate. The Mr. Shafskoff portrayed in your article gives unique consideration to each individual. The Mr. Shafskoff who drastically cut our financial aid seems to be a puppet of some highly ineffective system which he has devised to calculate each student's aid as if all individual conditions are not considered. After talking with many other students who, under similar circumstences, feel slighted by the lack of personal consideration given them by our new director, I feel I am compelled to give the other, accurate, side of the story.

It has recently come to my attention that the Financial Aid Office has exceeded their amount of HOLS money for the year. This raises a number of questions, such as how the office and our president is handling the situation. And how will the Financial Aid staff meet the needs of those students who have not yet received their awards, the students who will be enrolling in January, or the students whose circumstances will change and will need unexpected financial need? The unexpected financial need during the course of the academic year, IIT students have never received financial aid. I have been aware of this in the past and I understand that it is a common occurrence. But my question has been, what is a decent? From what I have seen, it is an amount that is marginally powerful, but not enough. Noting about it, I couldn't see getting decent to be a decent some highly sensitive equipment, which often cannot be calculated accurately, regardless of the circumstances. With many of us, under similar situations, we do not go out of our way to think about personal safety, and if we do, the thought is often at the back of our minds. Safety is a concern, but we do not take action to protect ourselves. This is especially true in environments where there is a high risk of injury or death.

The HUB Food Service received quotes from several vendors for the redesign of the cafeteria. The quotes were based on the current capacity of the cafeteria and the number of patrons it can serve. The design includes a new seating area, increased space for staff, and improved lighting and ventilation. The quotes also include a breakdown of the costs associated with each item, including labor, materials, and equipment.

The HUB Food Service employees were trained on the proper use of the new equipment and the importance of safety. The training included a review of the operating procedures and the safety protocols. The employees were also provided with a manual that outlines the procedures and safety guidelines.

Car Wash

Outward Bound

This film is surprisingly good. The film, Car Wash, is intended to convey its audience a laugh. I expected, accordingly, to witness another Mel Brooks, i.e., vaudeville type of film. It was not. This film is a comedy which fails to rely on film's bogey sex, fettish aromas, opportunistic plays to make its audience chuckle. What is considered levity in this film would have been considered levity fours Janus years ago. The banality of this film is business as usual.

What is funny? Clearly, any answer to this question would be subjective. Hilarity, or what constitutes hilarity is not easily defined. I am confident that once all the big irreligious philosophizing on this subject is completed, that very little could be generally asserted in regard to film's quickness. Rather, the true definition of fun remains a problem for laughing individuals to reckon with. What little could be enacted, however, was emulated by well by Mark Twain. Reflecting on the nature of "good times" Twains suggested that one becomes comfortable, pleased, or gratified, in a similar way manner to the manner in which one acts upon. An impression, unprejudiced, individual in a particular situation with which he is familiar tends to understate general affection evil. The same individuals tend to enjoy what is naturally meant to be enjoyed in the category of things enjoyable. The individual carries a cloudy disposition when his environment- usually the people around him- are exalted and secure. Fun is an emotional result of man being in harmony with his surroundings. A group of good friends having fun is a fine example of people in harmony with their surroundings. In this case the other people. Harmony is not a continuous state. Like as opposite emotion: gloom, anxiety, and loneliness. It changes and is always subject to what one endeavors. If a man engages positively with his life, he feels "good," and is naturally inclined to express his lofty spiritedness. The free which he proceeds to engage in addresses the world, exclaiming: "I am successful." Typically, the places of pleasure and during festivals to celebrate. They celebrate in a natural manner- in natural recognition, usually subconscious, that they have cooperatively withstood their environment's harassments. Life has a propensity to be difficult to deal with; but confidence and clever self-administration most often humble one's fears knock. When a pleasant thwarted his adversary he feels exalted, and the exaltation he observes is natural- the most thorough kind. Environments and stories flow from one person to the next, the essence of their expression, however, remains stationary.

Car Wash is a somber picture which applies to the life of relations presently. The film presents a common day for a set of metropolitan parents. It is a very funny film. How, one might query, is this film so hilarious? Quite tersely, it is hilarious because the characters are hilarious. They are simple people making the most of a predicament. Naturally, they ought to be funny. Living in base conditions requires that they transcend the surreal, and laugh in its face. Essentially the film is unaltered picture.

The movie caters for its viewers a strange, disturbingly terrifying emotion. That emotion, I think, is the emotion of identification. We can relate to the Twainian soul of man, the soul of intrinsic nobility that spurs everyone into connection and the human face into ongoing emotions. For me, these men lived the budget lives, I did, however laugh loud and long, remaining enchanted with each character how he dealt with restraints amid the end.

Each character was very well developed. The character, Jack, Schumacher, did it all without any Bully Mel Brooks sensationalism. No vaudeville at all.

I recommend this picture to all.

Golfers Gain Ground

IT's golf team swept their second consecutive meet on October 1, missing a perfect score of 132 by only 12. The Hawks defeated Notre Dame 131-140, Lewis 130-140, and the University of Chicago 24-0.

Steve Pinent led the Hawks with a round of 74. Mark Halitos and Thomas Johnson shot 76, and captain Paul Ehlers had a round of 77. Dan Haftek and Jerry Koller also placed 80.

Last Wednesday, the Hawks finished third in the Chicagoland Collegiate Athletic Conference tournament. The most was won by Purdue-Calumet with a total score of 418. ITJT accumulated 454 points, with Dan Haftek's round of 66 leading the team.

The Hawks were hampered by having three of their top six players miss the most due to class conflicts.

Next Friday, October 13, the team will compete in the 36-hole Chicagoland Collegiate Golf Conference championship. Coach Dan Stout expects a strong showing by the young squad in this medal play tournament.

Runners Ramble
by Jerry McKenna

IT's cross country team raised its season record to 19-11 with an eighth place finish in the Spartan Invitational, held October 2 at Asueros College. The Hawks are also one point ahead, with the final score 22-30, of Dougennis. The team will continue to improve.

The 15-team Spartan meet was won for the second time in five years by Illini Benedictine, with a total of 80 points. Monmouth College placed second with 136 points, while Trinity College took third with 136 points.

Hawks fared better in the team's main event, running the four miles in 21:47. Freshman Brad Kryger again finished first for the Hawks, running the four miles in 21:47. Captain Dave Trank showed the number one man for the Hawks with a time of 22:30.

It takes more than a degree in engineering
by Jerry McKenna

You're working hard for your degree in engineering. But what will you do when you get it? Where will you get the practical experience you need to make that degree pay off?

More and more people like yourself are discovering that one of the best places to get on-the-job engineering experience is in the U.S. Navy. As a commissioned officer in the Civil Engineer Corps, you'll have the flexibility to travel. Stretch your mind. And get your hands on projects you couldn't expect to touch for years, if ever, in the classroom.

Think you measure up to a get-ahead job like this? Why not find out. Chat with the Navy Officer Information Team the next time they visit your school. Or if you're already out of college, see your local Navy recruiter.

It's a dream job waiting for you.

Booters Bounce Back
by Jerry McKenna

The Hawks rebounded last Wednesday, however, by trouncing Eastern Christian 64-0. Tom Glenoe got it off to a fast start as he took a Vorse pass and scrambled the goalposts with a hard shot from a difficult angle. The Hawks applied more pressure, forced the visitors to handle the ball in the penalty area and Batidore's penalty goal was 2-0 lead with the penalty shot.

Mark D'Alfonso completed the first half scoring when his shot deflected into the net of a defender's body. The entire second half was played by the Hawks reserves, and they also dominated the game. Late in the game, Batidore scored the final goal. In the second half, the Hawks recorded the first shutout of the season, as the defense limited Trinity to seven shots. ITJT did not exactly play inspired ball, however, and will face a much stronger foe this Saturday in Purdue-Calumet.

Featured Athlete
Paul Ehlers

by Jerry McKenna

IT's varsity golf team is young and promising, but veteran players are the ones who usually provide leadership, and for the Hawks this season, that responsibility falls into the hands of Paul Ehlers. Paul came to ITJT three years ago from Menasha, Wisconsin, not to play golf, but because of the school's situation in his choice field, electrical engineering. He has been playing golf for only two years now, mostly during the summer, when he tries to get in at least nine holes a day.

However, golf was just a hobby to Paul, with the only competition being an occasional local tournament. Playing for the Hawks is not much different for him. Despite the manner in which matches are run, the real contest is not team against team, or even man against man. According to Paul, it is one man against the course. Scoring is done after play is concluded, so all a golfer can do is about the best round he can and hope it is good enough to win.

In his three years with the Hawks, in which he has twice bettered and once been named MVP, Paul has seen a great improvement in the team. In past years, the squad had to forfeit matches due to lack of available players. This season, though, there is plenty of depth, due partly to four freshmen who have joined the team. One problem remains to be solved - practices and matches both require extrahour blocks of time in which some team members, notably the architects, find hard to fit into their schedules. This situation has hurt the Hawks in at least one match already this season.

Meanwhile, the outlook is good. The team is young, and is surprisingly strong showing so far indicating that they should do very well in the near future. And next year, everyone, including captains Paul Ehlers, will be back.

VOLUME 19

In response to the number of complaints students have about changes in ITJT's financial aid policies, Title IV has been revised to allow students to apply for Federal Aid. The new policy is designed to help students who have a financial need but not necessarily a high need.

There are several ways you can benefit from this new policy, including:

1. Improved Aid Requirements: You may be eligible for a higher level of Federal Aid based on your financial need and other factors.
2. Increased Access to Funds: The new policy may increase the amount of Federal Aid available to you, allowing you to access more financial assistance.
3. Streamlined Application Process: The revised Title IV policy simplifies the application process, making it easier for you to apply for Federal Aid.
4. Increased Financial Support: The new policy is designed to provide additional financial support to students who need it, helping you manage your expenses and pursue your education.

The policy change is effective immediately, and you can start benefitting from these improvements. Make sure to review the updated Title IV policies and apply for Federal Aid to see how you can take advantage of these enhancements.
