IIT Gets $766,483 to Conserve Energy

By Vernon Alfred

The grant awarded to IIT is for a $766,483 project to develop a "smart" building management system. The system will be used to conserve energy in buildings on the campus of the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle. The grant is one of 21 awarded by the National Science Foundation to institutions throughout the country. The project is led by IIT Research Institute.

The project is aimed at developing a "smart" building management system that can automatically adjust heating, ventilation, and lighting systems based on real-time data about energy usage and occupancy. The system will use sensors and data analytics to optimize energy usage while maintaining a comfortable indoor environment. The technology will be tested in IIT's own buildings, with the goal of reducing energy consumption by up to 20%.

The grant is part of the National Science Foundation's "Smart Cities" initiative, which aims to develop innovative solutions to improve the efficiency and sustainability of urban environments. IIT's research team, led by Dr. John Karam, will work closely with local partners to ensure the technology is scalable and can be applied to other buildings and cities.

The grant is just one of many awarded by the National Science Foundation to support innovation and research in the field of energy conservation. Other projects include the development of new materials for energy storage, the optimization of grid operations, and the integration of renewable energy sources into the electric grid.

In conclusion, the grant awarded to IIT is a significant step towards developing innovative solutions to reduce energy consumption in buildings. The "smart" building management system developed by IIT's research team has the potential to save significant amounts of energy while maintaining a comfortable indoor environment. This project is just one of many that are working towards a more sustainable future.

Swanson to Resign

Bob Swanson, a member of both BC's coaching staff for the past six years and the Hockinson High School coaching staff for the past two years, has resigned as head coach of the Eagles football team.

His long-time connection with the team began when he was a student-athlete at Hockinson High School, where he was a star quarterback and helped lead his team to the 1965 state championship.

Swanson was a member of the 1977 BC coaching staff and later returned to the school as an assistant coach. In 1985, he was named head coach of the Eagles, a position he held for 11 years.

Swanson has been a key figure in the development of many young football players, including BC quarterback John Mullen, who is now a senior at the school.

He has been instrumental in the Eagles' success over the past decade, leading them to seven state championships and numerous other accomplishments.

Swanson's departure will be felt across the community, as he is well-liked and respected by both players and fans.

He will be remembered for his dedication to the sport of football and his commitment to the development of young athletes.

Netmen 3 and 3

Winning three of the last six matches, including a dominating victory over Bonneville, who has only been defeated by Argyle and North Kitsap, is a remarkable feat for the Eagles.

The Eagles' 3-3 record may not seem impressive, but it is a testament to their resilience and determination.

Their victories over Bonneville and North Kitsap were especially impressive, as both teams are traditionally strong and have a history of success.

The Eagles' performance in the last six matches is a clear indication of their improvement and growth as a team.

McMahon Honored

John McMahon, BC's head football coach, has been honored with the title of Honorary Coach for the Eagles.

This honor is a recognition of McMahon's long-standing commitment to the sport of football and his dedication to the success of his team.

McMahon has been coaching football at BC for over 20 years, during which time he has guided the Eagles to numerous state championships and other accolades.

He is widely respected for his expertise and his ability to develop young athletes into successful players.

This honor is a fitting tribute to McMahon's contributions to the sport and to BC's football program.
