Paint the Troll Road

Students are invited to paint their organizational emblems or other appropriate messages or pictures on the "tunnel" at 31st Street.

Any organization desiring to participate in the project should submit a copy of the proposed painting to the Student Life Office in advance for permission and review by CAT (the Committee Acceptable Taste). Make up of two faculty members and an administrative officer whose names will remain anonymous to protect the innocent.

Please don't feed the boss

(CPS) -- Colleges spent 20 cents minus out of each dollar they took in during 1984 on the care and feeding of administrators, the U.S. Department of Education reported Jan. 12.

By contrast, campuses spent 1.7 cents of each dollar during the 1974-75 school year to administer themselves, reports show.

Students, moreover, are not being spared the increased administrative costs. Departmental statistician Thomas Brown noted, "As the 1980s roll in, the added tuition - even after allowing for inflation - rose by 8 percent during the 10-year period he and Gaambos studied.

Education Dept. research chief Chester Finn commissioned the study in part to see if the Reagan administration could control the costs. America's Colleges are - unproductive and overly bureaucratic was true.

The administration had justified its costs for higher administration costs on the grounds campuses waste much of the money they've gotten on-going research grants. The study concluded Finn, in releasing the report, included the greater costs, a productivity problem in higher education. But Business Prof. Thomas Mathew of Vanderbilt, where Finn taught before going to Washington, D.C. --

Lab at night, alani firesides said it would be "relatively meaningless" to conclude that spending 20 percent of a budget on administration is inefficient.

Much, he explained, depended on "CA type and size of the business.

In deciding whether colleges spend too much on administration, Mahoney noted, "the larger schools would have more administrative costs because they have more programs. And administrative costs increase greatly if you count police and housing.

Festival comes to HUB

On Friday, March 4, 1988, the most interesting place on campus will be Herrmann Hall, the site of International Festival. This annual multicultural event is always greatly anticipated and enjoyed by the IIT community. From noon until 5:00 p.m., IIT students, faculty, staff and guests will present cultural displays and sell food and cultural items in booths set up in the Ballroom of Herrmann Hall. Cultural films and videos will also be shown during this period. The evening's free entertainment program, featuring music, dance and cultural traditions of various countries, will begin at 7:00 p.m. in the HUB Auditorium.

A planning committee has been hard at work to develop this year's Festival. Student organizations as well as individual students, faculty and staff have been invited to participate with exhibition booths and with suggestions of appropriate cultural entertainment for the evening program.

The Student Life Office is announcing the opening of the Office will be opening during the following hours:

Monday 12:00 noon - 5:00 p.m.

A.D. Hulk talks for Olympics

CHICAGO -- IIT has announced that Dennis Hull, the University's athletic director and former hockey pro, has been granted a four-month leave of absence coinciding with the Winter Olympics in Calgary, Canada. Hull will be doing background and commentary on the Olympics for a number of U.S. and Canadian radio stations and will be giving a large number of promotional speeches leading up to the Olympics.

Robert D. Topper, current assistant director, will be acting athletic director in Hull's absence. Topper, at IIT since 1961, has been serving as Assistant Athletic Director and will handle the basketball and women's tennis.

After graduating from River Forest High School in Lake Station, Indiana, Topper attended Aquinas College in Grand Rapids, Michigan. He later received an M.A. from the College of St. Thomas in St. Paul, Minnesota.

Topper coached at Andover High School in Merriville, Indiana. St. Francis High School in Traverse City, Michigan and Hartford High School in Hartford, Michigan. He then served for over a year as St. Bernard's High School in St. Paul as head coach, assistant principal, and athletic director.

Wesley L. Smith, associate director of the Athletic Department in Dennis's absence, is an experienced and energetic administrator who will give the needed attention to this job while still fulfilling his coaching responsibilities.

Drinking laws crack down

(CPS) -- While anti-drinking rules are being enforced on university campuses, university cheerleaders' jobs during the holiday break and could lose 2 North Carolina State students in jail, a California State University (CSU) at Dominquez Hills professor concluded campus attitudes still encourage students to drink.

Students, adds CSU's Dr. David H. Golding, are reporting the results of the annual survey of California at Berkeley study he helped direct, seem to be drinking as much as they always have, despite intense campus efforts to the contrary.

Most schools' students, he said, have cracked up "alcohol awareness" policies since 1985, when federal laws forced states to raise their legal drinking ages from 18 to 21.

To get liability insurance, colleges had to demonstrate to insurance companies they were keeping their undergraduates students from drinking liquor. But the Berkeley investigators suggested there has been no continued on page 7

Laws

profound increase or decrease in student drinking since the new policies began.

The reason is that many schools, Nasatir said, "are lax in observing violations of the drinking minimum age.
Alcohol, moreover, is often an integral part of social and athletic events, and the "awareness" programs, by not recognizing alcohol's role, are rendered ineffective.

Nasatir's research, part of an ongoing study of campus alcohol use, noted fraternities have helped keep general student drinking rates high.
"Young men living in fraternities seem to drink more often and larger quantities than any other group of similar young men in dormitories, or with roommates."

"It's not clear whether that's because fraternities recruit drinkers or manufacture drinkers," Nasatir continued.
"But that seems to be a phenomenon that holds true on all campuses with fraternities."

A solution, he suggested, might be to crack down on people and groups who serve liquor to students. "This has a chilling effect on individual willingness to serve alcohol."

At Marquette, however, a group of cheerleaders quit in December instead of tolerating a crackdown.

Eleven cheerleaders quit the Milwaukee college's squad after school officials suspendened 2 cheerleaders for swiping some leftover bottles of champagne from a private party.

"They said they could no longer cheer with 2 members suspected for something they all took part in or knew about," said Mark McCarthy, Mar-quettel's associate dean of students.

Former cheerleader Kim Heiler, one of those suspended, said cheerleaders often took leftover champagne from parties they had worked at as hostesses to save for a celebration after the first basketball game of the season.

However, the boat company that sponsored the party complained to the school.

At the same time, Raleigh, N.C., police, charged 2 North Carolina State students with counterfeiting drivers' licenses and selling them to classmates to use them to buy alcohol.

The 2 students built a large cardboard replica of a license.
They would then take photos of customers standing in front of the replica, and process the resultant artwork as a fake license.

The students, each charged with 2 counts of counterfeiting and selling drivers' licenses, could serve 3 years in prison if found guilty.

The University of Washington, however, may have been overzealous in attempts to control drinking. The school, facing a lawsuit from the American Civil Liberties Union and several UW law students, agreed not to search fans attending football games for alcohol. At the beginning of the 1987 season, university police had stepped up efforts to combat alcohol use during football games.

But administrators, heeding protests, agreed to halt the searches, at least for the last game of the season. UW officials say they will develop a revised search policy for next season.

Messler breaks record

Senior Mike Messler of the Varsity Swimming Team broke the team-all-time scoring record last week when IIT outscored the University of Wisconsin 112-99 in a dual meet at Oshkosh. The former record was held by Chuck Fox with 1212 points. Mike scored 18 points in the meet against Oshkosh to bring his total 1215. "Since IIT has 6 dual meets left this season, as well as two Invitations and the NAIA National Championships, Mike may be able to set a score so high by the end of this season that he takes years to surpass, by any other varsity swimmer or diver," exclaimed Coach Dennis Maloney.

Messler is IIT's first National Champion in Swimming and any other sport. He has set more records than any swimmer, has had two undefeated seasons, and has been a NCAA All-American as well as an NAIA All-American.
