10 Million Dollar Gift Boosts IIT
Wheaton Campus Growth

At a news conference on October 3, 1988, Illinois Institute of Technology (IIT) President Meyer Feldberg and co-chairmen John Stoecker announced a Grabill Foundation Gift, to the tune of $10 million. The gift, plus配套 funding totaling $10 million, will be used to design and construct Grabill Hall, the first building on IIT’s recently acquired Dan and Ada Rice Campus in Wheaton, Ill.

In announcing the amount of the gift, Stoecker, chairman of Grabill Corporation and a former IIT student, said, “I always had tremendous respect for IIT because it remains both accessible and responsive to industry. In addition to basic research, IIT and IIT Research Institute turn out practical technology applications that can be implemented immediately. Companies feel comfortable working with IIT because the university is exactly what industry needs, especially the rapidly growing high-tech companies along the I-88 corridor.”

In his remarks, Professor Feldberg said that a private university such as IIT is a natural complement to the process of growth in the suburban development that is being referred to as the private industry. He went on to praise Stoecker for his commitment and generosity.

“We at IIT are thrilled and honored by Bill Stoecker's leadership,” said Professor Feldberg. “This extraordinary gift will enable us to accelerate our plans for the first phase of construction at our campus in Wheaton. But, more importantly, the endowment assures that we will provide the highest quality advanced-technology educational programs in the area for years to come.”

Commenting on the Grabill gift, IIT Board Chairman Robert W. Galvin, who is also chairman of Motorola Inc., said the university was particularly pleased at the rapid progress of the university’s plans for its west suburban campus.

“At last month’s DuPage Club breakfast announcing the Grabill gift, IIT President Meyer Feldberg, IIT Board Chairman Robert W. Galvin, and I was particularly pleased at the rapid progress of the university’s plans for its west suburban campus. NECAAS STARTS OCT.16

Universities across the country are participating in the prevention of alcohol abuse by promoting “National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week” (NECAAS) during the week of October 16.

Students nation wide are promoting alcohol education, development, and decision making skills and positive peer influence. In its fifth year, NECAAS is sponsored by the Inter-Association Task Force on Alcohol and other Substance Abuse Issues, which represents student affairs professionals across the country.

“Alcohol Awareness Week at IIT is dedicated to year round emphasis on alcohol education and recognition of the individual’s ultimate responsibility for decisions regarding the use of alcohol,” said Dr. William Schaefer, Dean of Student Life. “It is in the best interest of the students, administrators and the community that such decision making be responsible and well informed. In addition, we want to encourage a partnership to prevent problems associated with alcohol misuse.”

CAPD TO SPLIT IN '89

At a meeting with the entire faculty of the College of Architecture, Planning, and Design, Professor Feldberg announced that he had made a decision to alter the structure of the college. As of June 30, 1989, IIT will have a College of Architecture.

Within the college, there will be two departments: the Department of Architecture and the Department of City and Regional Planning. The Institute of Design will report directly to the Provost for a period of two years. After two years, this separation will be evaluated to determine the trial period’s success.

In making this decision, it was his intention to consult with as many groups connected with the College as possible. To that end, Professor Feldberg and the Provost conferred repeatedly with the Dean as well as the Department Chairman. Additionally, he appointed a President’s Advisory Council, chaired by Dirk Lohan, including Helmut John, Thomas Beeby, Kevin Roche, Nils Diellert, Richard Latham, Bruce Graham, Philip Longstreth, and Dean Macris to examine the role of these fields into the next century and the part that IIT should play in that progress.

After Dirk Lohan compiled the final report, Professor Feldberg sought input on its conclusions from the students, the faculty, and the students. He heard from more than 20 faculty and student groups.

PITCHERS RETURN TO BOG

By John A. Pataz

The controversy has been flowing at IIT ever since Russ Johnson, the director of Hermann Hall, gave the manager of the Bog orders to stop selling pitchers of beer on Thursday nights. The decision was based on a ruling over two years old, with the purpose of curtailing the amount of drinking by undergraduates.

Tech news at the Bog last Thursday got the students angry response. "I feel that they should be able to enforce the state drinking ordinances without having to use the Bog for $35,000 and $15,000 a year. The room for the concerts has dropped from $500 to $1."

To the credit of IIT administration, a "peace summit" was called on Friday afternoon to try to quell a rising unrest among student leaders, who were being asked why. More than a dozen members representing students and administration fairly evenly appeared at the impromptu conference at Hermann Hall. Bill Schafer, who chaired the meeting, wasted no time in stating its purpose..."I hope we can come up with a workable solution to this problem."

Right away, Russ Johnson explained that the policy had been in effect for some time, but that the new management had not been aware of it until recently. Bill Schafer then asked what the problem was with having pitchers, and what alternatives could be used to replace them. John Laitar and Greg Gowden, representing the average student, expressed the opinion that pitchers added to the commodity of the Bog. "Three guys sit around a table and share a mug. It gives you the feeling of being part of a group."

PATAZ, the President of the Union Board, sympathized with the management problem of underage drinking, but added..."Once we invoke this policy, they (the students) said 'We don't want to come to your events anymore'...and I want them to be there."

The group discussed many solutions, ranging from banning under 21 students to using specialty marked plastic mugs. Finally, after close to 2 hours of discussion, a middle ground was reached. A trial method of carding all people entering the Bog on Thursday nights, and giving everyone a wristband identifying them as either under 21, or over 21 and over will be used. PATAZ will be sold only to those wearing the proper wristband.

Bill Schafer thanked the student leaders for their cooperation and understanding, and promised to keep everyone apprised of the situation in the future, at which the meeting was adjourned.

After the meeting I was asked by Union Board President Frank Martin if he was happy with the decision. "Pretty much," he said, "...I just hope that the students will start coming to the events now."

Maybe now that the beer is flowing free again, they will.

WE NEED WARM BODIES!!!!

Michelle R. Kochan, ATS Vice President

Have you ever had an idea or suggestion that would improve academic or campus life at IIT? Do you feel like you don't know where to take these suggestions or ideas? Do you want to help shape the image of IIT?

Your ideas and suggestions are needed on the ATS Standing Committees. Currently, positions are available on all of the committees. The ATS Committees are active, goal-oriented groups, where creativity and new ideas are welcome. You would work closely with the ATS officers, IIT staff, and administration. Depending on the committee, the time commitment would be approximately 2-10 hours each week. All students are welcome to participate, regardless of experience or background.

Serving on an ATS committee is a good opportunity to develop leadership and interpersonal skills employers look for in an employee. Being able to point to a specific project you coordinated for ATS will impress a company recruiter.

Membership on an ATS committee also enables you to meet and work with a wide variety of students. Who knows it may even be fun!!!

The following are brief descriptions of some of the ATS Committees. If anyone is interested, please contact Michelle R. Kochan at X0507 or go to the ATS office located in the west side of the IIT. Thank you for your support!

SECURITY

Members will discover and summarize what campus security improvements need to be made, and work in a constructive manner with IIT staff and administration members to make the improvements.

TEACHER EVALUATION

In addition to publishing all teacher evaluations in the Tech News, members will oversee the evaluation procedure to ensure it is conducted in a fair manner. The committee will also take up other academic issues, for example course availability and registration.

FICU-SAC/SHED-SAC

IIT is a member of FICU-SAC (Federation of Independent Illinois Colleges-Student Advisory Committee) and SHED-SAC (Board of Higher Education-Student Advisory Committee). These organizations send lobbyists to the State legislature to promote issues benefiting colleges and students, for example availability of financial aid funds. ATS needs representatives to send to the FICU-SAC and SHED-SAC meetings.

PUBLICITY

Members will work with the Assistant Treasurer to publicize ATS meetings and other events. Forms of publicity may include posters, announcements on WUOI, and announcements in Tech News.

COLLEGE BOWL

Each year, IIT hosts a "Jeopardy-like" competition called College Bowl. Committee members would coordinate the competition intramurally and enter the winning team into the regional competition.

CONNECTIONS

Members would work closely with the Treasurer to publish the IIT student telephone directory, "Connections."

Death Row Prisoner Requests Correspondence

Tech News recently received requests from Mr. Jim Jeffers:

Dear Editor:

I am a prisoner on death row at the Arizona State Prison, and I was wondering if you would do me a favor. I have been here for twelve years and have no family or friends on the outside to write to. I was wondering if you would put an ad in your campus newspaper for me, for correspondence. If no one puts an ad, then I might have some type of bulletin that you could put it in. I know that you are not a pen-pal club or anything like that, but I would really appreciate it if you could help me.

Since I don't know if you have an actual newspaper, I will just make a small ad and then if you have to change it around or anything, go ahead and do what you have to.

Death Row prisoner, Caucasian male, age 42, desires correspondences with either male or female college students. Wants to form a friendly relationship and/or less just exchange past experiences and ideas. Will answer all letters and exchange pictures. If interested, write to

Jim Jeffers, P.O. BOX 30964, Florence, Arizona 85222.

Sincerely yours,
Jim Jeffers.

Ph.D SAYS: "It's Womans Fault, Too"

The following article is from the column Technology News. It is an excerpt from the work by Roy U. Shenk, Ph.D.: "DATE RAPE? There's a lot of furor, especially on university campuses, about men's response to the ambiguity of women's "NO" and the complexities of the situation. In actual practice, she likely has said NO 150 times by the time sex involves. In fairness, it must be said that since Warren Farrell (author of Why Men Are the Way They Are) estimates there are that many steps from the start thru the coitus. Certainly most men are vividly aware that most women are quick to change their mind, and many along the way, and then permit the "objected to" step proceed.

Why do women say NO so much, even when they evidently don't really mean it? Simply put it is because they have been socialized to perceive themselves as subservient to men, and that lets men take all the responsibilities and risks. This boils down to retaining the moral superiority. And saying NO is important part of that sexist attitude of superiority. Actually, the women often are in a state of conflict with themselves, wanting to be sexual, but also burdened by wanting to live up to society's expectation of their female role.

It appears that a woman often can permit herself to proceed to the 149th of the steps, but not the 150th step. Stopping at that point might be all right if she were the only one involved. But she is not. There is also a man involved who may well develop a state of arousal that has an intensity which may be best described as similar to the intensity of severe cases of Pre-Coital Stress Syndrome (PCSS). Let's call this Pre-Coital Stress Syndrome (PCSS). It is sexist to condemn men who respond inappropriately under conditions of PCSS and not condemn at least equally the women who participate in getting them there (and also for not responding). In other words, it is sexist to condemn both those who actively seek the sexual intercourse and those who are forced to proceed to sexual intercourse they should avoid becoming involved in intense sexual intercourse.

The reality is that so called date rape is not just a male problem. It is equally a female problem, and it's not just a hot and open topic, but a current subject and just put it bluntly: Women, don't let the process start unless you intend to let it proceed through all 150 steps! Alternatively, if actual coitus is not acceptable because your "honour" is important to you, or because you cannot rise above your socialization and negotiate an alternative such as mutual masturbation before beginning.

With all the talk about the importance of equality in other areas of our lives, why is this serious question being ignored? Why aren't they asking their share of the responsibility for initiating sex? The answer is quite simple. Women are insisting more on maintaining their superior attitudes and the power that goes with their control, rather than accepting equality with men in this area. This is sexism that is on a par with any macho posturing by men.

In short, it's time we men begin demanding of women that they give up their control! By always being the one who has the initiative to say NO and instead that they begin doing their share of the initiating, coming down off their self-imposed pedestal of being above being active and honestly sexual.

Another incredible phenomenon in this age of "equal pay for equal work" and "affirmative action" is that women are still to a large extent expecting men to pay for dates. This custom made sense in the days when men were the sole wage earners. Can it be that women still believe that men should pay just for the honor of their presence on a date? That certainly carries a message of the superior value of women, and is sexism. Actually, if a woman just lets a man pay for dates, one of her implicit, silent but obvious messages is that she should be compensated more for his work so he can afford to pay for the dates.

I think we should be quite open and honest about this. When a woman expects a man to pay for their dates, she is prostituting herself. The fact that she has used her sexuality to gain something of significant monetary value, (That is a reasonable definition of prostitution). And therefore the only fair thing for her is to be an honest prostitute.

If she has a contract at the start that the woman will pay for the next date, the only honorable thing for the woman to do is to deliver on the contract.

Actually, there may not be a second date, particularly if the woman knows she will have to pay for the date. So if she or the other is to pay for the first date, let it be the woman. This seems like the only way to avoid misunderstandings as to the nature of the contract. Alternatively let each pay for their own share, all will save a lot of misunderstandings. Thus if a man and woman negotiate that they will each pay their own way, the contract is only for an evening together with nothing sexual implied. If the woman pays, she can decide later if she wants more to happen. It seems more logical that one doesn't start what one is not ready to finish. And finally, if the contract is for the man to pay, the woman should bring condoms along to assure that the contracted sexual encounter will be safe. The exception to this would be the rare occasion when the man or woman is truly giving a gift to the other person as on the celebration of a birthday, special event, etc. But that only works if both women and men give such gifts.

A safety valve is needed here, of course. Sometimes a date goes badly. In such a situation, the parties may mutually agree not to be sexual. What if a woman, or a man for that matter, backs out of the contract? Obviously a respect for the other person's dignity as a human makes forced sex unacceptable. By the same token, the offense of the other person could be seen as lacking in honor and trustworthiness, and should be avoided in the future. Alternatively, the person could reimburse the payer for the costs of the date.

International Student Holidays

Holidays are usually the most difficult times for international students in the United States. Most U.S. students go home or away for holidays, while international students remain on campus. U.S. students return from a holiday relaxed and happy about spending time with their families and friends, while international students feel restless, bored, and depressed.

If you are an international student or scholar, you may already be thinking about the four day Thanksgiving Holiday weekend, November 22-27, 1988. What will you do? If you plan to remain on campus in order to study, we suggest that you become familiar with the resources available to you. Many students who have been here for a year or more and know all the major campus resources feel that the experience is enjoyable, and worth it.

This holiday weekend begins on Wednesday afternoon, November 23, 1988, when participants board chartered buses at the ISB, which take them to their host community. When they arrive, they go to their host family's home, where they will live as members of the family until Sunday, November 27, 1988. On Thursday, students experience the traditional Thanksgiving dinner, which the dinner may contain some additional foods to accommodate the dietary requirements of the particular guest. Many different activities are scheduled during the course of the weekend; some involve only the student and the host family while others involve the entire community.

Host families are screened carefully and are provided with information and orientation prior to receiving a student for the first time. The families participate voluntarily and receive no financial assistance in order to participate. They participate because they are interested in learning about other cultures and because the

CSEP Library Open House

The Center for the Study of Ethics in the Professions will host an Open House in the CSEP Library in Life Sciences, Room 766 on Wednesday, October 19 from 2:00-4:00 p.m.

This occasion marks the 10th anniversary of CSEP Library. All faculty are invited to come and browse in the library and meet the new librarian, Dr. Shaun B. Blais. She is eager to learn about the research and teaching needs of faculty and students in order to make the library a resource actively used by many on the campus.

Running for ATS Secretary

One of the students running for open ATS Secretarial post is David Fleming. Fleming, a graduate student in architecture, brings diversity and experience to the election.

Fleming's goals are to record ATS proceedings, but more importantly to interest students in ATS and its projects. Fleming has served as a secretary of Alpha Phi Alpha and as the editor of a newsletter. He is also the managing editor of the National Journal, a student engineering journal with a distribution of 1,000 copies.

Having served on Student Government boards at Stanford University where he earned an engineering degree, Fleming made decisions about student group funding. He also counselled student groups on programming and budgeting.

"I hope that I can bring new energy and a fresh perspective to student government at UTF. I want to see ATS grow in influence and in the number of people it touches. I like to work with people to achieve mutually beneficial results, and I believe I would be an excellent addition to the Executive Board."

Architecture

The Architecture program has built up a reputation of being enjoyable and informative. All international students and scholars should have already received detailed information about the program at their mailing addresses. Applications and further information are available at the International Office, Room 103, Farr Hall.

If you are undecided about participating in the program, talk to an advisor in the International Office and to students who participated last year. You will probably be convinced that this is a great way to spend the Thanksgiving holiday weekend.
