Dr. Hassan Wins Quality Award

Dr. M. Zia Hassan, professor of management sciences and industrial management and acting dean of the Stuart School of Business at Illinois Institute of Technology, has been named to the board of examiners for this year's Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award.

The award, created by Congress and signed into law by President Reagan in 1987, recognizes quality achievements and successful quality strategies on the part of U.S. companies in three categories: manufacturing, service, and small business. Last year's awards went to Motorola Inc., the Commercial Nuclear Fuel Division of Westinghouse Electric Corporation, and Globe Metallurgical Inc.

The Secretary of Commerce and the National Institute of Standards and Technology administer the award and oversee the judging process. The board of examiners for the award is comprised of quality experts from industry, professional and trade associations, and universities.

Dr. Hassan was named a Fellow of the American Society of Quality Control in 1982.

IIT WEST Update from Meyer Feldberg

As you know, we have recently appointed a member of IIT's senior administration, Edwin F. Stueben, as vice president for IIT WEST. This appointment reflects both the expansion and accelerating pace of the activity connected with our west suburban operations.

The university is committed to the construction of the first building on the Daniel F. and Ad I. Rice campus, and we expect to occupy the new facility late in 1989.

Ed and a committee have already completed a detailed program of facility requirements of the Rice Campus' first building—a 55,000-square-foot structure to contain state-of-the-art classrooms and laboratories, a computer center, a library, IITV studios, and other resources and amenities. I am pleased to report that we have completed contract negotiations with a developer, Charles H. Shaw Company, and have hired Solomon Cordwell Buenz and Associates as architects for IIT WEST. We will break ground for the building within the next six months. Ed will continue to oversee the planning, construction, and development of the campus as well as generate substantial educational initiatives.

The decision to accept the Rice Foundation's land grant and build the new campus in Wheaton preceded the Grable Foundation's five-year pledge of $10 million toward building the construction and endowment. We hope that Grable's recently reported problems will be resolved favorably. The timetable of the Grable pledge will in no way impact our construction program. Construction will be financed through existing IIT resources. Income generated by IIT WEST will cover the cost of interim financing. As with any major capital project, IIT will seek private donations to support the new Rice Campus.

The Best and the Worst of 1988 - IIT POLL

Who was your favorite band in 1988? What was your favorite song? Your favorite album? How about your favorite movie? Your favorite Bog band?

Well, here you go. Here it is. This is your chance to answer the burning questions. Everyone I've heard has said that Tracy Chapman didn't earn her Grammy. Do you agree? This is also your opportunity to tell those bums who put together the American Music Awards that you don't agree with them. It's your chance to tell the people who work for the Academy of the Arts that they don't know a thing about IIT's taste in movies. But most of all, it's your chance to be heard.

Besides, how many of you have actually seen "The Accidental Tourist"?

In co-operation with WOUI and Union Board, Technology News is polling IIT. WE WANT TO KNOW WHAT WAS...

Well, I got to the Bog a little early last Thursday and from the way things started, it looked like it was going to be a slow night - the band wasn't there yet and the entertainment came from people working in the Bog. However, the night proved to otherwise as the crowd rolled in and the band played. The band was called Decades, and the music they played came from the 60's to the 80's. It turned out to be a pretty good night.

Right from the start, it was clear to me that the music was going to be just as good as the crowd was dancing to it. They started the show with hits like "Land of 1000 Dances," "Pretty Woman" (the Roy Orbison version), and The Wanderer. The set spanned more musical variety with songs by Bryan Adams and concluded with the Steppenwolf hit, "Born to Be Wild," highlighted by an excellent Electric and Bass guitar jam. The second set continued with this wide range of oldies from classic dance music like The Detroit Medley, Good Lovin', and the band played "Twist and Shout." The 3rd set highlighted some newer 80's music such as "I Can't Get No Satisfaction," and "Come On Over." Finally and... "I Like You About," and "New Sensation" by INXS. The encore concluded with an enjoyable mix of "I Can't Get You Out of My Head," "Home," and "Some Lovin'," and finally "Sweet Home, Chicago."

I'm going to give this band the Detroit Medley, Good Lovin', and The band played a song called "Twist and Shout." The 3rd set highlighted some newer 80's music such as "I Can't Get No Satisfaction," and "Come On Over." Finally and... "I Like You About," and "New Sensation" by INXS. International Organization
A new organization is forming on campus and is termed "The Impetus of the International Student Office" and it needs your help. Our student body is incredibly diverse in cultural heritages, but many of us experience that diversity only once per year, at the International Student Festival. It has been many years since there was an ongoing forum to promote and encourage the mingling of the many cultures represented on our campus. This forum will have many names which will capture the flavor of the upcoming dynamic mixing which we intend to establish. We also need a little money, and to promote all this, we will sponsor a booth at the International Fest, March 3. For 90 cents an entry, you can suggest names for the new organization. We'll split the pot with the winner and announce his or her name in Tech News. At that same time, you may also sign up for membership.

Our international organizational meeting will be held on Thursday, March 9, from 9:00 to 1:00 in 301-303 of the Hub. I would encourage you to come and meet some of our international students, permanent residents, and new students. In the meantime, I will be working with the impetus of the International Student Office and making arrangements for a free round trip to the Chicago World's Fair. AT THE UNKOWN REVIEWERS

The Dude on the Right:
Well, I got to the Bog late on Thursday, and I saw the band coming in, so I missed the opening entertainment. As my partner said, the band was Decades, and as the name suggests, they played quite a wide range of hits from throughout the last decades. In the first set, they played "Roll Over Beethoven. From the 60's we heard songs like "The Wanderer, and the Mottown sounds of "Knock on Wood. Born to Be Wild was a representative of the 70's, and songs from "REO Speedwagon round out the set.

The second set continued with this wide range of oldies from classic dance music like The Detroit Medley, Good Lovin', and the band played a song called "Snap Shot. If they're as good as any of the other new bands that have played this semester, it should be a really good show. Once again, and as always, LET'S PACK THE BOG TO THE WALLS!!!

FROM THE NEWSDESK

John Abbott
"No one ever listens anymore."
"Huh?", Marc said.
"I said, 'no one ever listens anymore.'"
"Oh, yeah."
"I'm not kidding. No one pays any attention to what every one else is saying anymore."
"That's not the point."
"Then what is it?"
"You know that Phil Collins song, the one that goes, 'too many people, too many problems.'"
"Marc shook his head."
"You're not going to sing it now...are you?"
"No. The song goes, 'too many people, too many problems, and not enough love to go around'"
"Marc shook his head again. "I'm glad that's over."
"You're missing the point."
"Or rather, you're making it."
"What do you mean, 'not enough love to listen to anyone anymore?""
"Exactly. We've become such perfectionists, that we cannot people on their grammar when they tell us 'Yours ree pants are on fire.' We don't pay attention to what they're actually saying."
"So how does Phil connect with all of this?," Marc asked.
"There's too many people, with too many problems. So we shut them out. We don't listen to anyone anymore."

LAST WEEKS QUESTION:
WHAT MAJOR CHICAGO INSTITUTION WAS OUR DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE AFFILIATED WITH AT ITS FOUNDING?

ANSWER

The Armour Institute and the Art Institute of Chicago joined forces to establish the "Chicago School of Architecture" in 1895, the eleventh school of collegiate rank to be established in this country. Combining Armour's fundamental training in materials engineering (where architecture students were first admitted in 1893) with the Art Institute's two-year Beaux-Arts program (begun in 1894), the program produced a generation of influential architects who rebuilt Chicago after the Fire into a modern city and created a new standard of neo-classical and eclectic architecture. Prominent among those involved in the school were Daniel Burnham, John Root, and William Le Baron Jenney.

In 1936, a committee of prominent Chicago architects, headed by John Holabird and including Alfred Alschuler, C. Herrick Hammond, Jerrold Loeb, and Alfred Shaw, conducted an international canvass to recommend a new director for the Department of Architecture at Armour. Their choice was Ludwig Mies van der Rohe, who accepted with the proviso that he could have a free hand in reordering the Armour curriculum. That granted, he joined the faculty in September, 1938. During his twenty years on campus, he revolutionized the study of architecture, designed the new IIT campus, and confirmed IIT's reputation as one of the world's great schools for the study of architecture.

Loyola Downs Hawks
For the first time in 8 seasons, the varsity swim team has had a losing dual meet season when last Thursday the team lost the dual meet to Loyola University with a 120-118 score. This meet-ended the dual meet season with a 4-6 record. The last time the team finished under the 500 mark was the 80-81 season when the Hawk swimmers and divers finished with a 3-6 record.
Coach Matuch stated that with the hard schedule the team had, he was very pleased with the team's efforts. "Five of our six losses were to Div. 1 NCAA schools, NW, Loyola, Bradley, and 2 meets with Loyola certainly give us stature- our only loss to a non-division school was the fine University of Chicago team just a few days after our semester break. Hopefully this hard schedule will give us an edge in our conference meet and in the Nationals coming up in early March." In the Loyola meet, IIT got only 4 first places in the 13-event meet, but earned 7 second places along with getting 1-2-3 sweeps of both diving events. First places were by Scott Ternovits-1m and 3m diving, Matt Fernandez-50y freestyle, IIT's 400yrd freestyle relay team: Fernandez, Finn, Hathaway, and Leaf. The next teams competition is the 3 day Mid-Western Championships in Milwaukee. The Hawks are hoping to hold on to their 4th place finish of last season in the 12 team competition, or even improve on it.

Hawks Down Rosary
In the final week of the regular season the Scarlet Hawks down Rosary College Tuesday night, February 21st, by a score of 83-53 at home. The team was led by Charles Warnell who made 8 of 13 shots and scored 21 points and had 9 rebounds. John Lorenzo led the rebounding brigade with 9 rebounds. Guard Jim Janus had 8 rebounds. The Scarlet Hawks now have a 7-6 record in conference and are bound for the District 20 playoffs.

The Hawks also defeated Purdue of Calumet last Saturday night February 18th by a score of 74-68. Ryan Kirkland had 28 points and was backed up by Charles Warnell with 23 points.

Chicago Athenian Collegiate Athletic Conference Standings:
- Olivet Nazarene 10-0
- St. Xavier 8-2
- IIT 7-2
- St. Francis 7-0
- Rosary 7-0
- Purdue Cal. 6-2
- Northeastern 6-0
- Roosevelt 0-1

The District 20 NAIA Playoffs begin Tuesday night February 28th and a victory by the Scarlet Hawks on Friday night February 24th vs. Olivet Nazarene would give the Hawks home court advantage again.

WHAT IS BRAZIL REALLY LIKE?

by RAUL NOBRE MARTINS, JR.

Ever since I arrived at IIT almost three years ago I have been asked different things about Brazil, my native country. People are very interested in stories and they wonder whether there is any truth in them.

Last December, two days after I returned from the Winter Session in Science, I went to Brazil on vacation for the very first time since August of 1986. In a rather unique situation (being two semesters for the Master's and some seven or eight needed for the Ph.D.) - my wife Nola and I had the opportunity to go back (visiting the country, my roots, and our lives) without really going back (without having to move, re-adapt, or re-establish our professional lives).

We had always basically thought of our friends back in the States, specially our friends here at IIT. We saw so many examples of Brazilian culture and at the same time we have been asked so frequently that we constantly wished you could all be there with the two of us, visiting our family and friends.

Trying to bring the most realistic picture of Brazil we could, I shot some 1,500 slides and some 12 hours of video tape, which we now plan to be shown at the Brazilian booth at the International Festival. Here are some answers to these frequently asked questions.

LANGUAGE

No, the language in Brazil is NOT Spanish. Brazil is the only country in South America colonized by Portugal and we speak Portuguese. What may confuse some of you is that personally I do speak Spanish, which I happen to have learned right here in the United States as a high school exchange student. When referring to a language, there is no such a thing as "Brazilian Spanish" - a language which is officially called "American.

"Brazilian". There is certainly what one refers to as Brazilian Portuguese, in a similar way as one refers to American English.

Portuguese is the youngest of the Latin languages. It is very similar to Spanish, but significantly different from those who are not familiar with languages - it sounds more French.

BRAZIL vs. THE U.S.

There are several basic similarities between the two countries: they are both very big, have large cities, were colonized by Europeans, and are just about as old.

Brazil is 10% smaller than the entire United States and some 8% larger than the contiguous 48 states. Population wise, the US has 250 million and two Brazilian cities (Sao Paulo 12.5 million and Rio de Janeiro 9 million) are larger than New York City.

The Portuguese first came to Brazil in the 1550s under the J oão Afonso to the bandeirante movement. The bandeirantes captured slaves from the indigenous population and sold them in Europe.

RELIGION

Encyclopedias will tell you that over 90% of Brazilians are Roman Catholics. The Vatican will tell you that Brazil is the largest Catholic nation on earth. What they do not tell you is that being Catholic in Brazil is quite different from what an American would imagine.

The Black slaves influenced the way we eat, the way we dance, the way we think, the way we dress, the way we behave as "Catholics.

The slaves had very strong beliefs of their own and organized themselves into some sort of Catholicism, the sources of which were the free Black communities in Brazil that came so widespread in Brazil that from a purist point of view, we are not really Roman Catholics as the Americans are. The only thing you can say is that Brazil is colonized by Portuguese and Brazilian Catholics. That means a whole new way of doing things.

The American press made fun of the Brazilians last year because they believe in Astrology. In Brazil even the highest hierarchy of representatives from the Roman Catholic clergy make reference to the stars and believe in such things as superstition, super-natural events, or mysticism.

There is a crowd in Brazil almost amounts to two people in the same chair. Party-ies are big and if you are invited you really have to go, even if it is for three. Brazilians would rather see that you go with a group of friends and not come see you at all. You may arrive at midnight to a party that was scheduled for 8 p.m. and not only does the whole family go to parties, but the whole family dances. They dance, drink, and laugh together. The different regions in Brazil in very strong. Families tend to be very close, intimate, together.

There is no such thing as inviting your parents to come to your wedding. For some reason, you never feel you should call in advance to check if it is "convenient" to go to your parents home and you marry or start living by yourself.

Family is where you also learn many things. Things like drinking, for example. Children are often exposed to all sort of training. You start when you are a child, having one small (ONE, and a SMALL one) glass of wine on two or three occasions a year. By the time you are a child they have allowed a glass of wine or beer on Sundays. When you leave your teenage you already know all the basics and you don't have to drink what you can't drink, not to drink without eating and not to drink faster than you can digest.

Family also means you support your parents when the time arrives when they can no longer do themselves. Except for very few special (and chronically ill) they will never place his or her parents in a care or citizen home.

A FINAL THOUGHT

As an alcoholic commercial used to say: people should stick together, not spagghetti. The whole Brazilian culture is built around that notion. All sorts of things are connected to that notion: there is a very warm and colorful notion we Brazilians try to develop (even at IIT, as difficult as it may seem).

In Brazil, for example, there will be a Brazilian booth at the International Festival. Do stop by to learn more about Brazil, just or about.

What's so funny—and so frustrating—about being a stand-up comic? Find out as Tom Hanks and Sally Field share the spotlight in this engaging comedy-drama. Hanks, fresh from the triumph of Big, received equally enthusiastic critical raves for his energetic portrayal of a faltered medical student who seems to come alive only when delivering one-liners at local comedy clubs. Field shines as a restless New Jersey housewife who dreams of stardom on television and the nightclub circuit. Seeing the potential in Field, Hanks takes this fledgling performer under his wing and together they try to make a living with laughs while struggling with the increasingly competitive nature of their relationship—as well as the deep feelings they begin having for each other. Punchline consistently hits the mark with its skillful blend of hilarious comedy and heartfelt drama that will make you laugh until you cry.

U. OF N.D. STUDENTS GET TO SEE
"SAMMY AND ROSIE GET LAID"
(CPS)—After weeks of debate and protest, students at the University of North Dakota will be able to watch "Sammy and Rosie Get Laid" after all.

Student President David Glassner vetoed a student government ban on the film Feb. 5, clearing the way for the movie to be shown Feb. 23.

The UND Student Senate voted 9-8 Jan. 28 to prohibit the University Program Council from showing the movie because, although they had not seen the film, many felt the title would offend North Dakotans and spur the state legislature to cut funding to the school.

"I want UND to appear as an innovator, not as a negative institution," said Student Senate Steve Martin, who supported the ban.

While the title of the film has put off some booking agents at commercial and college theaters alike, the film's distributor said UND's was the most heated debate over the movie so far.

"There have been people who chose not to book it," said Wayne Salazar of Cinema, the New York-based distributor of "Sammy and Rosie Get Laid."

"This doesn't surprise me at all," Salazar said of the controversy at North Dakota. "As the country becomes more conservative, so do the children that are doing the programming. Still, it is surprising that the student body is so up in arms about the film. This is a level of extremity I haven't seen before."

Students protested the ban almost immediately.

Although the "Sammy and Rosie Get Laid" includes some sex scenes, critics of the ban argued the film's message is political and the title is British slang for being taken advantage of by an institution.

"I'm repulsed by censorship in any form and that's the reason I'm here," said UND student Robert Zieba during a protest against the ban. "It's insulting to my intelligence."

When Glassner vetoed the ban, however, the debate surrounding the film died almost as quickly as it started.

"If we talked about it, discussed it with the senators, and the lines of communication between us and the senators were good," said University Program Council Chairman John Hitchcock.

"Students have the right to see the movie and not have it be judged by its name. They can choose whether to see it or not," Hitchcock added. "The things UPC deals with are more controversial than the Senate wants to deal with."

The function of college cinema," said Salazar, "is to expose people to different cultures and different points of view.

"We want to bring to UND students things from outside North Dakota," said Hitchcock, "different perspectives of the world around us."

Valentines Day Massacre At IIT

by John Abbot
Residence students did more than just kill time last Saturday at the St. Valentine's Massacre Party. Around 300 bodies rocked and feasts were stumped in the East Ballroom, with guys dressed up as gangsters and girls dressed up as flappers.

The St. Valentine's Day party was a coordinated effort of many people, said one person who was the group's most credited. Mark Bowers, the President of Graduate Hall.

Mark came up with the idea in response to a search for a party theme. The traditional "sweatheart" type of Valentine's Day party was discarded because many people thought that it was an old worn out cliche.

Mark, with some help from Kim Hamilton (President of Lewis Hall), Nell Novickis (an RA in Lewis), RHA, and Joel Jacobson (of Fowler's), organized the party which was primarily put together for residence students, open to everyone. With music provided by a DJ, and food and drink provided by the organizers, the party was an inspired success. When asked if the massacre was as much of a killer as she hoped it would be, Kim Hamilton said: "Oh yeah. We all had fun, and a little bit of everyone came.

Kim, by the way, had tied with Natalie Novickis in the flapper costume contest earlier in the evening. The contest was dressed in early 1920s attire, paraded themselves in front of the rest of the crowd, who had voted for their favorite costume by applauding. Kim and Natalie were both so popular, that after three times of trying to pick a winner, the flapper contest was declared a tie-in-between the two.

The winner of the best gangster contest, chosen by popular vote, was fittingly won by Mark Bowers.

But the highlight of the party was really the ending. The DJ put on the old college party favorite "Shout!"

"And the house roared.
