ELECTION SPECIAL

Dean Deakin's sounds need for leadership

Do Illinois Tech students appreciate the responsibilities of student government? This question came to me as I talked over my recent conversation with Dean Liggett, chairman of the election commission.

"Only ten days until election and no candidates out for February class. How are we going to get candidates to run for office?" This was the question to which Dean was seeking an answer.

A progressive step was taken last year in the strengthening of student government on campus. ITSA was reorganized, with students in complete control of the Board. Only one faculty representative and the Dean of Students now sit on the Board members. The responsibility for administering student activity funds is truly the responsibility of the elected representatives of the students. This is as it should be, since the welfare of all student activities is to give students an opportunity to express group cooperation and leadership. Accepting the responsibility of leaders in every facet of campus life is an inculcation by participation in student activities. The opportunity is here, but where are the leaders?

DEAN G. E. DEAKINS

The Illinois Tech campus is no different from our local villages, colleges, and national communities. We work and play together for the good of our community. Our representatives to legislate and administer are in the interest of all members of our society. If we are to have a strong, efficient, and effective administration of our campus, we must have strong, capable men and women to fill the offices of our student government. To encourage the right people to become candidates for these offices is the responsibility of every member our campus community. Those elected will be called upon to make personal sacrifices in order that the welfare of the community may be advanced.

There are many complications that come to those in positions of leadership which affect some of the sacrifices. The personal satisfaction that one receives from a well-done job well done cannot be measured in dollars and cents. A concrete return is, the added prestige which holds an elective office gives one in the mind of a future employer.

The citizens of our Illinois Tech community must accept the responsibility to govern their own affairs. A ballot filled with capable candidates and a record-breaking vote gives us the continued success and the continued success of student government at Illinois Tech.

AND I REPEAT !!!!! ARE WE GOING TO BE LED AROUND LIKE A BUNCH OF SHEEP!!

Junior Members-kev to better representation

With the beginning of the next semester, the elected Junior Members-at-Large will contribute their share of student representation on the ITSA Board of Control. Her service on ITSA committees is designed to improve student administration.

If this original purpose of the ITSA constitutional change made last year to be achieved, it demands the election of a man who will voe with the benefit of the entire student body in mind. This content is the only chance this semester for all students to exercise their suffrage. All members of ITSA are eligible to run for these positions.

My intention if elected is to accept and promote all constructive ideas and criticisms connected with the improvement or advancement of student life.

I intend to discharge all my duties with diligence to obtain the results we are all seeking—true school spirit, a better college atmosphere, and greater participation in athletics. It is my purpose to make things such that they will unite student body in a closer union of friendship.

Election tests voting spirit

When the polls open Wednesday, Illinois Tech students will name their choices for class officers. In addition to this, they will be deciding the efficiency of the new ITSA election procedures. Last year's ITT Students voted for an amendment which provided for alternate yearly elections for class officers. This is to provide continuity in the ITSA Board of Control.

The real test of this innovation will be the enthusiasm displayed by the voters. The candidates have disagreed some very impressive campaigns.

1) We do not advocate preferential referendums or card playing restrictions.

2) We do not condemn frustration but believe that the majority of students should participate in government rather than have a few active frustration against.

3) We understand service, honesty and integrity of purpose in fulfilling the wishes of the majority of students.

Raymond J. Epich

I believe that I am qualified for this office because of my experience on the ITSA board of control as president of the January '60 class. As a member of the ITSA, I started the ball rolling on the establishment of a committee to investigate cafeteria prices.

My active membership on the varsity wrestling squad indicates my willingness to work for stronger sports teams. My position in student activities and government.

Elections Tomorrow

By Joe Baso

In Illinois Tech's student body still politically conscious as the last two years in which student elections indicated 47 candidates are anxiously hoping that the results of Wednesday and Thursday's polling will return an affirmative answer.

Election commission officials and candidates hope that voters will not turn a cold shoulder to this crucial election. This somewhat lackluster campaigning has been attributed to the fact that only first, second, fourth and sixth term classes are electing full classes of officers, and as also to the Christian voices interpreting the campaign. They say the student body will prove by a heavy turnout during the two-day election that interest in class organization and ITSA representation is still strong.

Polling will begin at 8:00 a.m. in the main dining room of the North Student Union Wednesday. The polls will be open until 4:30 p.m. Wednesday and from 8:00 to 4:30 again on Thursday. Voting will be fast, convenient and private, with the election commission's assurance that the polls will be adequately staffed, and accommodations will be sufficient to handle even rush-hour traffic without delay. The procedure will be speeded up if voters have identification-ready when they receive their ballots outside the polling place, officials pointed out. A major identification form such as driving license, social security card, or student ID card will be accepted, the commission reports.

All students, both semester students and full-time students, will elect president, vice-president, treasurer, and social chairman for new terms. Second, fourth and sixth semester students will elect an entire slate of class officers for the first time. They will not elect class officers for the second time this year. All students regardless of semester will elect the junior ITSA member-at-large, a position which must be filled by its first member, and this third term position will serve for one complete year. He will join the senior member-at-large, whose term expires in spring, as an overall student representative on the ITSA board of control. The president of each class and the officers of the ITSA constitute the remainder of the student governing board. Each member has a one-year term of office.
Senior candidates state platforms

THOMAS GLEASON
As head of a slate of candidates—Aladin, Chalmers, Volpe and Johnson—I welcome this opportunity to let the voters who do not already know us know how we stand on the issues that will confront them.

Always the interests of all the students will come first, not those of any one, two or three individual groups. We shall try to avoid unnecessary issues due to an unrealistically close schedule of social affairs. We intend to work closely with I.T.E.A. and other class officers. We shall try to minimize the cost of functions so that the "Senior Powell". We approve of social drinking at school dances. We propose to sell class rings on a non-profit basis. If any other important issue shall arise we will poll the senior class before reaching any decision of our own. This is our platform and we shall see that it is carried out.

Thomas Gleason

ROBERT KARLIECK
As a candidate for the senior class president, I feel that there are certain basic principles of deep interest to the students of the senior class. The future president of the senior class should be aware and vitally concerned with such problems as the social affairs, the so-called non-profit cafeterias and bookstores, and the inadequate study halls on the campus. I clearly recognize these problems and firmly believe that it is the obligation of the senior class president to use the power and influence of the office of class president toward their solution. And finally, I can only add that if I am elected, I will honestly and faithfully represent the students of the senior class to the best of my ability.

Robert Karlieck

MARKS LEVY
The senior year in college should be a time most remembered by students.

Instruments in fulfilling this aim would be periodic open meetings of the class, discussing the social calendar, placement, and to ensure everyone of keeping well informed of class activities through frequent statements of progress.

Qualifications of a class president are administrative ability and experience. My qualifications, while feeble, should speak for themselves.

I was recently re-elected to the presidency of our fraternity, am completing a year as business manager of the Railroad club, worked as sports writer for the Technology News and was one of the organizers of the intramural tennis tournament.

I wish to thank that I will, to the best of my ability, fulfill the wishes of the senior class, and make their final college year a memorable one.
