ITSA Board Unanimously Endorses Change in Organization's Fiscal Year

ITSA undergraduate students will be voting on a ITSA Constitutional amendment to change that organization's fiscal year, when they cast their ballots for Board members on December 2 and 3. The constitutional amendment is in a vote that will be taken by the Board at its next meeting, scheduled for January 1 and 2. Presently the ITSA fiscal year coincides with that of ITT.

ITSA members will be voting on the proposed amendment which allows for the organization to change the fiscal year from July 1 to December 31. The amendment was proposed by the President, and the change was endorsed by the Executive Committee.

The Board has determined that this change would be in the best interest of the organization, as it would allow for more consistent financial reporting and easier budgeting.

The amendment has been reviewed by the Board, and it has been approved by a vote of 9-0. The amendment will be submitted to the voters for approval at the December 3 meeting.

If approved, the fiscal year will be changed to December 31 to January 1, and the organization will operate on a calendar year basis. This will allow for easier integration with other organizations and institutions, as well as more consistent financial reporting.

Fiscal Year Change A Necessity To Organize ITSA Board Budget

To be included on the December election ballot is an ITSA constitutional referendum to change that organization’s fiscal year. The acceptance of this proposal appears to be a large step in reorganizing ITSA’s tangled monetary problems.

The referendum will ask the change in the beginning of the fiscal year from September 1 to January 1, so that it will begin when the newly elected Board of Control members take their seats. Although it will not coincide with the IIT financial year, the advantages of such a change seem to outweigh the disadvantages.

The major benefit of the change is that it will provide some of the student organizations who receive money from ITSA to better plan their spending, so that they do not pass over their budget.

It has happened in the past that one slate of officers has spent nearly the entire allotment by January, leaving the new officers with little or no money to finance the operations of the second semester. The result is a curtailment of student services, or expenses over the budget allotted by ITSA.

A second advantage is that it will clarify the accounting system of ITSA, according to ITSA Treasurer Bill Schiemann, a desirable effect if only to keep better track of ITSA funds.

Still a third advantage is that many of the organizations will have past officers on campus able to serve in an advisory capacity in regard to setting a budget. Presently, when the budgets are established in September, many of the people experienced in drawing up budgets have been graduated, and are not available for consultation. Because so few students graduate in January, most students who have worked on budgets before are still on campus, and are able to give their advice.

In light of the recent budget cuts for many student organizations for the academic year 1969-70, this referendum seems to be one workable way to balance anticipated deficits in years to come. Each slate of ITSA Board of Control members would have their own budget to work with, their money coming from ITSA to check overspending, and to assure the student body of the services they are entitled to through payment of the student activity fee—included in their tuition.

If we sit back and keep the present budgeting system, we cannot expect to solve ITSA’s monetary problems overnight. What is needed to start financial reform is a “yes” on the referendum ballot. It is to the student’s benefit to accept this crucial issue.

Editor's Note

The views expressed on the following pages are those of the candidates for members of the ITSA Board of Control and Freshman class officers. These elections will be held December 2 and 3. These statements are the views of the candidates and are not necessarily those of Technology News.

As a service to the students of ITT, Technology News presents the issues and statements of the candidates. As all elections are important to the people they affect, so too are these. The students are being asked to elect a new Board of Control, the Freshmen, a slate of officers. These people are the decision makers who affect much of the student life.

It is the duty of each student to know the issues and the answers. Technology News presents these views. We also urge all students to vote; apathy is as equally criminal as ignorance.

Those people still wishing to run for an office may do so by turning in their petitions to the Dean of Students office by Wednesday, November 21. These are the candidates who have hounded in their petitions before November 19, and by no means a complete list of the candidates.

It would not be too great a generalization to state that it is from the academic community that has come a great proportion of the new knowledge, ideas, and catalysts for change which have resulted in radical alterations of the world's condition. If the university fulfills such a role, then the voices of the students calling for improvement of the academic condition at ITT have been answered largely by attempts to silence them. We may rightly lay blame on the powers of authority and their failure to listen. However, we as students, must consider that what has been said was not heeded because it was not understood.

Students, and, in particular, student leaders, have never thought clearly enough about their real goals or articulated them plainly, therefore, they have lost sight of what these are. By merely leveling their attack upon authority of any kind, what has been accomplished is imposition of further restrictions on academic freedom by the authorities.

PSYCH 3

In past the College of Liberal Arts at ITT has been a refuge for competent engineering students. Recently, however, ITT and the rest of the world have begun to realize that man cannot survive on Calculus and Chemistry alone. With the establishment of the Stuart School of Business and Finance and the merger with Kent College of Law, new-engineering students no longer have to take a back seat to those in EAPS. People are realizing that in order to become a "well-rounded" individual, one must be able not only to work with machines, but with one another.

With the initiation of the General Education Program, the College of Liberal Arts is more than ever an integral part of the ITT curriculum.

When decisions are made in the future concerning curriculum and other academic and social matters, not only will the engineering viewpoint have to be considered but also that of the Liberal Arts major.

It is not so much a matter of polities as a matter of attitudes and principles that should differentiate candidates. It is my belief that a majority of candidates in an election such as this upcoming ITSA election are truly interested in representing the people who elect them. But once they are elected, they are swallowed up by the organization's structure to the point of immortality and this results in a general feeling that student government structures are useless, irrelevant, and unapproachable by those who are not elected members of its structure. This is because student government structures are developed to officiate and regulate the few elected members and the membership which is the purpose of any governing body, those governed, is ignored.

A body's representative should be one who attempts to reach out of this defined structure and initiate channels for contact so that he truly represents a body of people, not just his own body. Once (Continued to page 7)

Arch-ID Representatives

Nicholas Despotas

ARCH 3

Crown Hall people constitute a liberal-minded minority in a school of conservative architecture. It is necessary for a representative of the architecture-ideology department to represent this fact. Governing decision-making in the administrative and student bodies can only gloss over the needs and wants of the people of Crown Hall while respecting the far more powerful voice of the technical faction that populates seventy-five per cent of our campus. To most of these people, the inhabitants of Crown Hall are other conglomerates in a formless black box on the basement floor. Indeed, in the history of planning, the black box has remained unaltered since the first class in the morning—and up in the air for the rest of the day. And when we talk really badly about ourselves, no one seems to listen. Nobody really has to listen, for we are all a little bit out of it.

Needless to say, the most important aspect that a person aspiring to the position of arch-ID representative must have is awareness of the needs of the people of this department. I can only mention a few of the groups, architects, and IDs. Very simply, having spent a year as an ID major, I feel that no matter what personal views are, I will represent any person or idea that comes my attention. In the representative office, I have held in High School and my hometown government; this has been the only way to function as a representative office. I hope that proper representation can establish relations to the student body.

I believe that a person in the position of representing Arch-ID has the dual job of representing the people and views of the Institute of Design and the Architecture of ITSA, and anyone else up to it. Part of this job is to keep the people in Crown Hall informed about what’s going on at Tech.

While I, like anybody else, probably disagree with a lot of the speeches delivered by the architecture faculty, I feel that no matter what personal views are, I will represent any person or idea that comes my attention. In the representative office, I have held in High School and my hometown government; this has been the only way to function as a representative office. I hope that proper representation can establish relations to the student body.

Have you noticed: We’re getting parking for 2000 cars. Unfortunately it seems that 2001 people drive. It’s also a real shame that we get tickets for using the teachers’ lot when it’s empty because all their cars are in ours. I also think that there must be a way to make the scheduling so we don’t start right after one rush hour and finish just before the other.

If elected I intend to do the job, namely representing you the commuter. I’ll try to get all the opinions of all the commuters and I will bring them up at ITSa meetings. I’m not the kind of guy who is easily put off so give me a chance to prove as your commuter representative. Vote for John Lord.

has the right to distribute to both student and faculty, and for that matter, administration; literature or information which he deems important.

In turn, his colleagues have the right to accept or reject this information presented to them. This can be compared to two people conversing; one wishing to speak, and one accepting or rejecting the other. Surely IIT cannot deny us freedom of speech, even though other parts of the first amendment are denied us. Do the students have the right to make their own judgments, or must we accept an administrative censure which allows only screened material? The ineffectiveness of this censorship is apparent in the proliferation of advertisements and soliciting in student mailboxes.

With regard to a similar inequity in school policy, in the past semester and in previous years students have been dragged before the Disciplinary Board. Why are the students tried by the other two-thirds of the university, the faculty and administration, a kangaroo court void of student participation. Supposedly we live under a law which provides that those being tried anywhere in the country shall be tried by a jury of their peers. This would suggest an all-student Disciplinary Board, as opposed to the present all non-student Board. Further, you ask, can the students try those members of the faculty or administration who are questionnable?

Students should be represented on the Disciplinary Board, they should be represented on the Board of Trustees. The students ARE one third of this university.

When are they going to be treated like one third? That is my intention if I am elected. I am afraid, as I mentioned earlier, that I cannot really represent the apathetic majority. I CARE!!!

My experience with school government is small. I bring no lengthy list of credentials to recommend myself. My main reason for running is to express some of the views on Tech issues which are shared by many of the students here. These issues are specifically connected with the financing of ITSA funds.

Two of the most recent issues are:

1) The recent allocation of $100 to Bob Boal’s political aspirations.
2) The wanted ITSA concert time.

The time is a confusing issue. I cannot understand how the student government can help to two distinct rival organizations at the same time. Was this for the good of the students? Or, in truth, was ITSA rewarding its member for his years of service. The second is a form of hidden subsidies. It subverts the student’s entertainment desire. Instead of having one truly prominent event which could draw a big at Tech, we are offering three mediocre events. How can anyone be anything but apathetic toward these events?

NC Speaker Examines CW Methods, Morals

"Should the United States maintain chemical warfare research as one of its major weapons?" was the question posed by Prof. Francis Horak, guest speaker at last Wednesday's Newman Club meeting. Horak, a former member of the chemical warfare (CW) research division of the Canadian Defense Board, discussed the major chemical weapons and questioned the morality of chemical warfare.

Chemical warfare "is more than just spraying of nerve gases," related Horak. He classified chemical weapons into four major divisions: Chemical irritants, defoliants, psychological weapons, and nerve gases.

Nerve gases are the most popularly known of the chemical agents. First discovered as insecticides, they are now used for nerve cell study. As insecticides, nerve gases will come into increasing use when DDT is banned, claims Horak.

Considering the questions of morality behind the use of chemical agents as weapons, most people combine a highly emotional response with their ignorance of the subject. The shimatae dangers to human bodies, the lingering and irreparable affects, and the inability of gases to discriminate between combatants and civilians make chemical warfare seem a horrific weapon to many people.

To the scientist, the morality of CW is a subjective topic which is outside the realm of scientific objectivity.

As to the question of whether the U.S. should maintain CW research and development, Dr. Horak felt there was no way of avoiding it in the present circumstances. He declared that too much money and brainpower had been used in an effort to develop the CW weapons, and not enough had been applied toward shortening it.

He further declared that research should be done in a more open fashion, and with greater awareness of human values.

this end is strained, students will begin to look upon a governing body, not as an elite group out for their own benefit, but as a major voice in achieving overall benefits and equally important, a group that will stand by its decisions and the decisions of the majority of those represented.

many reasons like the number of students around you, what they think about you, and many times the late hour forces decisions that are not well thought out.

As it is now ITSA is too small to accommodate this because it does not have representatives from every group on campus. That is why I am for restructuring ITSA to the Senate system proposed a year ago. The reason it did not come about last year is that there were just a few people really enthusiastic about the restructuring and the most enthusiastic one was made the president and given many other responsibilities. But this year we have twenty-one people interested in making ITSA useful to the students.

Bowling Team Remains Tops

From the smoke-filled rooms of the rec center has emerged a highly successful bowling team. The team at present is not in possession of first place in the South division, but leads both divisions in total points. Continuing their streak of success went their first game they recently defeated Remo Bayer soundly. The recent success of the team is not the outcome of the work of only a few players, but the result of a tightly knit network of team spirit and hard-earned skill. Statistically, this can be made apparent by the present player standings of all bowlers in both divisions. Fifty of the Tech bowlers rank in the upper third, three being in the top ten, among which is the No. 1 man thus far, Mark Komarka, with a five game average of 208.1.

Looking at team statistics we see that the Tech dynamo has brought back twenty of the twenty-two points possible in two games. The only two points not gained came from the recent plundering of St. Joe's, the second game of which was lost by one point, 927, 911. The final pins total however rang out another Tech victory. Tech 4356, St. Joe's 4325.

Phi Kaps and Triangle To Vie for Championship

The second bout of the semi-finals, Tuesday, found Triangle victorious over the Sigs with a score of 8 to 6.

The opening kickoff broke through the steady downpour of rain and the long, muddling rain duels began. The wet, slippery field made fast ground-gains difficult, resulting in an increase of pass plays by both teams.

In order to counter Triangle's pass strategy, The Sigs put up a strong pass defense, and as a result scored on an interception early in the first half of the game.

Triangle then switched to a short pass offense in order to crash the strong Sigs defense. This seemed to be the key, for the Triangle team began moving slowly, steadily across the field.

Late in the first half of the game, Triangle's quarterback Arthur Carone completed a long pass to Ed Mihlech, who traveled the remaining twenty-yard dash for a score. When Triangle failed on the conversion, the score remained tied, 6-6, at this point.

Late in the game, a fumble by a Sigs quarterback in his own end zone brought a safety, adding two points to bring the score to Tri. 8, 6.
