Campus Cop Cited For Meritorious Service By City, Institute

by Paul Reynolds

The police of the city must receive the worst press of any group that exists. You can hardly pick up the paper without some mention of brutality, corruption, or even stupidity towards the public. The criminal percentage of bad cops can pull the whole institution, and the good police officer never sees one word about himself. This story is a small attempt to rectify that situation.

Jim Varkalis has been a patrolman with the IIT Campus police for almost two years. Now, in a 30-year-old resident of Chicago, he, his wife, and his daughter still live in the neighborhood of 34th and Ashland. Many of his 31 years have been spent in public and security work, also in Chicago.

Prior to joining the IIT force, Jim helped organize the Andy Franz Security Service. After that, he helped establish District Security, another private police firm. His most responsible job came during the Democratic National Convention in August, 1968, when he was coordinator of all the private security forces at the Amsterdam Hotel working directly with the Secret Service.

Since coming to IIT, Jim has been an outstanding member of the force. The last few years have been the best examples of his consistently high performance, as he has picked up the IIT commendations and 3 Chicago Police commendations for exceptional police work.

The first of the Chicago commendations was the result of his apprehending two men stealing from an auto, and the third was for the capture of another burglar chief. It is the second that he is most proud of, and that the Chicago Police were most grateful about. On the 4th of July, he saw two men struggling with a Chicago policeman. As he rushed to aid the officer, he noticed one of the men had a knife. Due to his absence in drinking and ignoring the two, the Chicago policeman was seized by surprise, and his officer was knocked unconscious. Jim Varkalis and two other officers removed the two men from the crimes.

His IIT commendations have been for incidents at least as meritorious, if not as spectacular, as the three above. He was caught in the presence of a suspect's wallet, another theft from a man, and so on. His last arrest, for an attemption of a robbery of three armed robbers, occurred immediately after the crime, but to the partial surprise of an earlier incident. After taking the offenders down to the 21st District, it was learned that two of them matched the description of two robbers who had robbed an IITI nurse of $454 two years earlier. They were later identified by that nurse as the men who did it.

Jim Varkalis, with all his experience, likes working on the campus more than any other place he has been. "I really like working with students. You can always get a laugh, and most of them know me. They are the best people to work with."

Some students who know Varkalis recognize the situation. "He never tries to hassle you, and you can talk to him — he's the guy all right."

With luck, maybe we can keep Jim and the others like him. We need cops like this.

IGT Sponsored 'Blue Flame' Breaks Land Speed Record

672.467 mph, a new world's record for a land vehicle as the Blue Flame streaked through the measured miles at Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, in 5,784 seconds on Friday, October 20, 1970, by 484 mph. The record setting car was designed at the Institute for Gas Technology, an Illinois Institute of Technology affiliate, and by the Gas Dynamics Laboratory, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

The power source of the Blue Flame is the reactor of Liquified Natural Gas (LNG) with hydrogen Peroxide.

Gary Gabelich, a former test astronaut for North American Rockwell Corporation, drove the Blue Flame. He was supported by a crew from both IGT and the Gas Dynamics Laboratory.

Constitution Nears End, 18 Try For Commission

Three major issues came out of the ITBA Board of Control meeting Wednesday night.

Voting on the new constitution and the appointment of eight student members to the President's commission has been delayed until the next meeting, three times the Board of Control were filled.

The students on the commission will consist of one representative of the Student Government, one from Representatives, one from the Graduate Assembly, and one each from the Undergraduate Senate, the Graduate Senate, and the IITI. The constitution commissioner will oversee the entire process of the entire commission.

144 Freshmen Elect Board

In a typical display of IIT spirit, the ITBA freshmen class elected a Freshman Board last Tuesday. Only one of the candidates eligible to vote cast their ballots. Even more satisfying was the large number of freshmen for the open positions.

Of the nine candidates, five were from one freshman group, one from another, one from a third, and only one non-freshman candidate. The turnout was after the deadline for registration was postponed because only six people originally decided to run.

The results of the elections were as follows:

David Jacobs—Alpha Epsilon Pi
David Green—Alpha Epsilon Pi
David Freed—Phi Kappa Sigma
James Pope—Phi Kappa Sigma

Constitution Commissioner

The new Constitution Commissioner is Chuck Hass. As the new Constitution Commissioner, he will be in charge of the entire process of the entire commission, including the constitution commissioner will oversee the entire process of the entire commission.

Navy ROTC Has Its Day

Last Wednesday was Navy Day, and the IIT Navy Unit was there. The Commanding Officer, Capt. L. Brown, and the Academic Vice-President, Dr. W. B. Brown, had a take-out dinner for the ladies of the University Hall at 9 a.m. A noon meal was also served by the lady by the 2nd Navy Office's order to cut the cake. After the brief ceremony, coffee and cake were served to students, staff, and faculty.

The Secretary of the Navy John H. Chaffee asked if in his Navy Day message, to put, "...I am deeply proud to join the defense of the country by our qualified appreciation of the services of our commissioned Navy and to the services of our commissioned University in the Navy. Each is meeting the highest standards of the U.S. Navy—"Mark of a Man."

Stacked Deck in Elections?

Elections for student representatives at IIT can be to the student what running a shell game is to the player. What shell you point to is the peal under the shell. We all know the rules and how to find the peal; it's the shell game, because we know all the tricks, and has the odds on his side.

The hand is quicker than the eye — trick seems to have been used in the Freshman Board elections. There are some discrepancies in the running of the election; some persons having tried to cash in on the apparent confusion in ITGA. Publicity for petitions fell short of what was necessary to generate interest in prospective candidates. All the candidates, save one, were members of fraternities (our lonely dormie did not win). Therefore, there is no majority representation in the Freshman Board; no commuter representation; just the fraternities. This presents us with an impeachment of representation (how many fraternity members really understand the problems of dormity and commuter students?) and the old argument, "Well, the dormies are apathetic, the commuters are apathetic," can no longer apply. They were just not well informed to petition information (purposely perhaps)?

Two fraternities ran the elections. The candidates from one of the houses received all the first positions on the ballots (known as . . .). An old political trick, as people usually mark the first name on the ballot. There was no time between petition deadline and elections for candidates to slate their positions and views.

The poor turnout at the polls (146 out of 600) was mainly due to the fact that many students refused to vote blindly for candidates they knew nothing about. The polls were not well manned and there was no wealth of information on where they were located.

Technology News suggests that the Elections Commission Board be re-visited. Instead of one chairman, there would be three co-chairmen, one from the dorms, commuters, and frats. These co-chairmen would be responsible for the protection and concern of candidates and petitions, preservation of ballots, ensuring that students know where to go in advance the position of placing polls.

Technology News will also publish a special issue where candidates can slate their views, positions, and ideas. This publication will be the best way of providing free air to these candidates. We are not trying to beat any dead carcass or divide people by the editorials. The system can easily be prohibited — what we would like to see is safeguards against the possibility.

Student Mob — Trick or Treat?

It is one of the prime peace candidates of the year, Adial Stevenson III. Any trouble on that march, or during the rally, and Adial can take it good-night. And the funny part is that Adial could do more to help their cause in one day in the Senate than a year of marches and rallies.

I do not support Adial Stevenson III, but I have to see his supporters led to the altar like the innocent lamb they appear to be. Halloween is an appropriate day for such a rally. I approach it with Trick or Treat and children's pranks. I only hope the trick isn't on the children.

Mad Housewife Parallels Techawks' Own Livelihood

by George Stachnov

Did you ever wonder why millionaires don't buy their own cars?

Well, in "Diary of a Mad Housewife," Time Baker does just that. She thinks about her husband. She thinks about him while he's carefully selecting all the things he wants to purchase for the big wedding: He's planning her birthday: she's planning her birthday. She's planning her birthday.

She steps to consider her children. The two little folk who have given her nothing but trouble since she first set foot in their kitchen. She's thinking about her husband. She's thinking about him while he's carefully selecting all the things he wants to purchase for the big wedding: He's planning her birthday: she's planning her birthday. She's planning her birthday.

Carrie Booggin plays Tina, and since this is a diary she becomes the only real character in it. All the other characters of the film are seen through her eyes as something more or something less. But that's good, because they contribute to the sad sense of loneliness in her life, to the feeling that she needs something, and if she doesn't find it she's going to explod. Does that sound like someone you know?

Well, Tina finally decides that she has found a way out of her narrow little corner. She takes on a "lover." He turns her on. He turns her on. And finally he breaks her and tells her that she enjoys it. So she looks at him and decides his sick. Mind you she's not sick but she's sick. While she's getting through the room, when he tell her that she is enjoying it, the decision of HE'S sick.

Does that sound vaguely familiar? This film is a relevant to a great many people, but perhaps it is particularly relevant to all you little tech-wives (you hear me) who are constantly complaining about how the administration is walking all over you and telling you what to do and spending all your money. Why don't you get out? Because you love it, don't you? Just like Tina does. Only you won't admit it any more than she will. You won't talk out and take your money with you. Will you. Then you'll miss all the fun. Wouldn't you? And you won't get together and really try to do anything to change this school.

Tina thinks maybe her lover was right, to just go to a sensitivity training session. The other members are screaming at her and telling her to make her way to the administration. But the camera is set up so that WE, THE AUDIENCE, are looking at the other people in the group. And they're screaming at US. But we don't care. Maybe we're all just a little apathetic, like Tina.

$1.4 Million Endowment for IIT Environmental Eng. Dept.

IIT Public Relations — Illinois Institute of Technology recently announced a $1.4 million grant from the Pritzker Foundation of Chicago to establish a privately endowed environmental research and engineering program. The Pritzker Foundation grant provides $900,000 for an endowed professorship; $500,000 for the Pritzker Fellowship Fund; $250,000 for remodeling of IIT's Alumni Hall to house the new Center; and $150,000 for purchase of instructional and research equipment. It will also provide four additional staff personnel in specific disciplines relating to environmental control. The new Center will be geared to an enrollment of between 40 and 50 full-time students.

In announcing the grant, IIT President John T. Retta told the new Pritzker Environmental Engineering Center would seek "usable solutions to practical problems of pollution in conjunction with its research and graduate fellowships in the broad fields of science, technology, law, psychology, finance and management." Dr. Retta explained that the Center would investigate the theoretical realities of environmental control as it is affected by technology, legislation and available manpower. The purpose of the Center is to provide a comprehensive educational program, research capabilities and a body of knowledge which would be available to assist in the development of sound policies for environmental control.

We are indebted, President Retta told the Pritzker Foundation which will allow us to proceed toward this goal. "As citizens and inventors," he pointed out, "they are extremely aware of the practical problems of pollution, and they have been quick to realize that only through intensive research and academic contemplation can a new environmental ethic be evolved."

In his statement, President Retta noted that engineering control of man's environment must rely upon a sound knowledge of the fundamental processes in science, technology and the social sciences. "We must also consider the serious legal, ethical and legislative problems involved if we are to evolve a safe, plausible system of environmental controls."

Pigeon Kicker "Plows" On The Screen

by Stephen Thaler

Bill Wilson is relatively new to the film producing game — and proves it in his second attempt in the field, "The Sideling Glances of a Pigeon-Kicker."

He intended to portray what he termed "a growing segment of the American population - adults who cannot identify with either the Establishment or the Hip Subculture," and to a certain extent, he succeeded. It is unfortunate that the film is rather cliché-ridden, but its most significant hangup is its seeming lack of direction.

Johny (Jordan Christopher) is a college graduate who drives a taxi to support himself while trying to find his niche in the entertainment business. However, he doesn't find one — in fact, he doesn't even come to understand himself. Consequently, his problems revolve around alienation from self and society.

On the other hand, Johny's babysitter (Robert Walden) simply does not understand his wife's needs. For example, he leaves a party with another woman and excuses it by explaining that his wife needs to be a little jealous. Unfortunately, he is extremely insecure so all of this leads to something approaching a nervous breakdown on her part.

At the same time, he suggests that Johny should treat his girlfriend (Jill O'Hara) well, only to find that Johny has deserted her a few minutes before over a disagreement concerning the future of their relationship. In effect, it is a consistent failure in family relationships — probably in everything else as well.

But the fun doesn't end here, more area information is available.

The Screen

Techin — no air, because Johnny goes back to his girlfriend only to find that she has been sleeping with his best friend (whom he thought to be a homosexual). He leaves her for the second time in a rage that momentarily drives him to take his taxi on a mad race around New York which terminates with his attempt to drown in the Hudson River without a bridge.

So, any event, the motion picture "The Sideling Glances of a Pigeon-Kicker" comes off as a mildly confused and unnecessarily complex view of a segment of America society which has been ignored. Additionally, the background music is poorly recorded and not very well chosen, though the photography was outstanding.

All things considered, it did manage to provide an entertaining evening — in spite of itself.

Just like the other one...

Practiced for the IIT basketball team is standing at a fine job. Coach Ed Glinzy and assistant coach Terry Doboga report on the drills, held on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m. and on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 12:15 to 1:30 p.m,"

The IT cross-country team showed improvement, last Saturday, when they competed in the very tough National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) meet at North Central College in Naperville. The Hawk runners finished eighth out of 12 schools, behind winner and host North Central, who broke the top two finishers in Gary Warren and Mel Kistov. IIT's total of 195 points put them just out of sixth place, behind Millikin and Trinity College, and ahead of nine other teams.

Wally Saager once again led the Hawks, finishing 11th. Bob Ivanos came in 16th, after a fifteenth place finish last week. Gerry Wilcut showed the best improvement; although finishing well down in the standings, he lowered his previous best time for the five mile event by more than one and one-half minutes.

An upgrading of the schedule has tended to downgrade the weekend record, but Coach John Mattias is pleased that the team is developing and polished at this time.

The new players on the team, three or four steps to figure in immediately and help. The others all have varsity potential. Coach Doboga has high praise for each of the newcomers. Commenting on the new material, he said, "We have a number of good freshmen who, looking ahead to the future, will help our varsity program. Newcomers Bland, Perazak, John Walefield, Paul Dominguez, Wayne Bean, Tom Spallou, Bob Anderson, Leroy Smith, Steve Eng, and Jim McCurley have all shown definite promise which only needs to be developed and polished at this time."

There are now being completed for the formation of a junior varsity. Coach Olson explained, "Since it has been so well sold that it has been for a long time, we are scheduling a team on the varsity program which we hope, will not only keep the interest of the boys at a high level, but also aid in readiness for future varsity assignments. These younger team potential, but need the experience of college-type competition. The last 7 or 8 players of the squad will participate in these games, which will be preliminaries to the varsity games. The JV will be on against the bench during the varsity game, ready if needed. It will be the first time in eight years that IT will have a junior varsity team."

by Larry Millerman

Last Sunday, the IT cross-country team officially opened the season by playing St. Joseph's College at Racine, Illinois. Unfortunately, the team was put only one out of five records. Final score: St. Joseph's 5, IIT 2.

The next match will be Sunday, November 8, at 1:30 p.m. IT will face V of I, Chicago Circle, here at IIT. What the team needs is a good turnout to show them that the IT student body refuses to be apathy by first impression: Instramental results. Thursday, October 21, 2nd South over Marshall by forfeit. Boris Langer, 1, Kistov 0, Tuesday, October 27: Pier Hall Ann.; 1, Versus 0, Knuckle Gag 14, TD 0.

The championship contenders have been declared. These teams from each league will battle for the title of IFC football champ. All but one game — between Triangle and AEPi — has been played, and the outcome of this game will affect the standings. And with an O-O record, AEPi shouldn't give Triangle more than a scare. Representing the first league are Triangle, Thirti Xi, and Alpha Sigma Phi. From League Two: Phi Kappa Sigma, Delta Tau Delta, and Pi Kappa Phi.
