NASA has received bids from six companies for a $50 million advanced computer system contract. The contract will fund the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's (NASA) Human Exploration and Operations Mission Directorate's (HEOMD) project to develop an advanced computer system for use in future missions to Mars and beyond.

The six companies are Boeing, Lockheed Martin, Northrop Grumman, Raytheon, and two smaller companies, Astra and TechProspect. Each company has submitted a proposal outlining their plan to develop the advanced computer system.

The advanced computer system will be used to manage the complex systems that will be required for a mission to Mars. This includes controlling the spacecraft and managing the crew's activities. The system will also be used to monitor the health of the crew and manage the mission's logistics.

The advanced computer system will be a crucial component of the mission, as it will be responsible for managing the complex systems that will be required for a mission to Mars. The system will be used to control the spacecraft, manage the crew's activities, monitor the health of the crew, and manage the mission's logistics.

The selection of the winning company will be announced in the next six months. The contract is expected to be awarded in the next year.
A Lesson from the Primaries

There are a few things to remember from the last primary in New York, for whether or not it may have lacked in political importance, proved one thing: namely, that if the voter is given a choice between candidates and if enough controversy is stirred up so that the facts can be clearly shown, even if it costs the millionaires, the bosses, the polls, Mauro significantly, that the voter is otherwise would not necessarily vote as he did in the past.

The ultimate lesson in this primary would be: to select the candidate of the people, not the boss's choice or the millionaires' choice. To see that we, the people, get our voice heard.

The process of communication is a word that is terrible to define. Everyone, in the United States, has his own definition. Each person who has something to say, to have his say heard, must make it known to others. It is a matter of whether or not one's voice is heard. This is the way we can be heard. If we are silent, no one will listen to us. If we are heard, we can convey our ideas to others. The word "communication" means to share something with another person.

LETTERS

In the last essay, I had been asked to write about the communication gap that exists between the public and the government. I would like to expand on this issue in this essay. The communication gap is a problem that exists between the public and the government. It is a problem that has been present for many years and has only worsened in recent years. The government has not been able to effectively communicate with the public, and the public has not been able to effectively communicate with the government. This communication gap has led to a disconnect between the public and the government, and it has made it difficult for the public to understand the decisions that the government is making.

I believe that the government needs to do a better job of communicating with the public. The government should be more transparent and provide more information to the public about its decision-making process. It should also be more responsive to the concerns of the public. If the government can better communicate with the public, it will be able to build trust and credibility with the public. This will lead to a more effective and efficient government.

In conclusion, the communication gap is a problem that exists between the public and the government. It is a problem that has been present for many years and has only worsened in recent years. The government needs to do a better job of communicating with the public. If the government can better communicate with the public, it will be able to build trust and credibility with the public. A "Southerner" Interview

SOUTHERN EDITOR: IT - has been reported here that, that 62-1/2 million votes cast in America and 95 of them uncounted.

WELL, things have been rather down lately. Why, some time last month, you remember, I heard that we were going to have a runoff here in Atlanta. You know, for the state Senate seat, right? You can't be doing that now, can you? After all, we don't have any state Senate seats. Right? That's what the pollsters said.

"Yes, sir, I do. And, before your time."

"No, sir, I didn't. I know you've been busy. What's the news?"

"PHILS RAMBOUSCH!
Since you're the only got in this club, we'll make you secretary."

Pearlstein Primary Starts Spits Election Campaign!

By Veny J. Kaplan

Selling Monday Edition

Once again the citizens across the primary election season as they do every four years, cast their votes. This time, however, traveling up to the Pearlstein High School's main doors, they could notice a major change. The once-steady stream of cars moving past the school was replaced by a bustling crowd of people, all eager to vote. The atmosphere changed, the tension rose, and the energy was palpable.

Announcements

Double Feature

The Pearlstein Primary starts off with a bang this year. The school is hosting a special event, the "Double Feature," which will take place on Primary Election Day, April 24th.

The In-House Drama Society and the School's Debate Team are excited to announce their joint production of two shows. The first half of the evening will feature the Drama Society's production of "The Importance of Being Earnest," while the second half will showcase the Debate Team's performance of "The Great Gatsby."

All students are encouraged to attend, regardless of their usual interests. This event promises to be a unique and exciting experience for everyone involved.

Melvin Belli to Speak at Kent College Law School

Melvin Belli, a well-known trial attorney, will be speaking at Kent College Law School on April 25th. Belli was a personal injury attorney who became famous for his high-profile cases, including the Jonestown Massacre and the Zodiac Killer cases. His straightforward delivery and ability to connect with his audience have made him a sought-after speaker. His talk will be titled "The Art of the Persuasion: Advocacy and Advocacy in the Modern Age."

Belli's speech will take place at 7:00 PM in the main auditorium of Kent College Law School. Tickets are available online for $20.00 each. For more information, please visit the school's website or call 123-456-7890.

PROBLEMS OF KENT

Kent College has long been a source of controversy and debate. From the school's controversial admissions policies to its recent decision to ban the wearing of religious attire, the school has faced numerous challenges in the past. However, the school's biggest problem may be the lack of resources and funding. Kent College is a private institution, and despite its high tuition fees, it struggles to provide adequate resources for its students.

Kent College students and alumni have started a petition to increase the school's budget and improve the academic facilities. The petition has gained support from several local organizations, and the school's administration has responded by promising to review the budget and allocate more funds for student aid. For more information, please visit the petition's website or contact the student government office.

Telemarketers Banned From Campus

The Pearlstein High School administration has announced that they will ban telemarketers from the campus effective immediately. The decision was made after a series of complaints from students about the intrusive nature of telemarketers calling them and disrupting their studies.

The ban applies to all Pearlstein High School students, and the administration is urging all students to report any instances of telemarketing on campus. For more information, please visit the school's website or contact the student government office.

The Rock of Chicago
Macbeth is Eerie, Haunting

By Steg Hartley

The whole mise en scene of the 1972 University of Rochester Repertory Theatre's production of Shakespeare's Macbeth was remarkable.

The set design was intricate, with the stage divided into two parts: one representing the Castle and the other the Cawters. The lighting was subtle, adding to the overall atmosphere of suspense and anticipation.

The actors were all professionals, and their performances were captivating. The character of Macbeth was portrayed with great intensity, and the audience could feel the weight of power and its consequences.

The production was truly a masterpiece, and it left a lasting impression on all who saw it. It's a must-see for anyone interested in Shakespeare's works.
Netters: Solid for Big Year

by Harvey Scholz

Standing of several returning players, coaching and scheduling of matches, has put the University of Illinois tennis team on a solid foundation for a solid 1972 season. Coach Harry Aikawa plans to use captains Matthew Cohn and Stuart Johnson whenever they can be used, along with returning All-American Rick Zehr, Dave Norton, Paul Femminic, and Michael Gutierrez in forming one of the strongest teams in the Big Ten.

Aikawa has been named assistant coach of the national team by the United States Tennis Association. He will, along with Jim Li, Doug Cutler, and Tim Mullen, give the Tornadoes very strong coaching.

Coach Aikawa has been putting them through the toughest practice yet. Most of the new recruits will be used in the varsity program, and work on the varsity team will be done in a very strict schedule. The Tornadoes will be very solid this season.

Swanson Lends Large Talents to IIT Staff

by Harvey Scholz

Richard Swanson is in his first year on the administrative staff as a member of the administration.

The new IIT student, a chemistry major, is an active member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. He has been elected to the National Honor Society and the Phi Beta Kappa society.

Swanson attended North Park College in the Chicago area, and played basketball for North Park College. He was a member of the 1959-60 Viking team that won the CCIC (Chicago Collegiate Intercollegiate) trophy and the Midwest Conference championship.

The new IIT student, who left the ranks of basketball at August, graduated from North Park College with a major in chemical engineering and a minor in business administration.

Dr. Swanson is a member of the American Chemical Society, the American Institute of Chemistry, and the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

He has already made a big impression on both the basketball and football teams, as he has shown his loyalty and devotion to the school. He is looking forward to his future as a member of the IIT staff.
Pitching Key to Hawk Baseball

by Harvey Schmelz

On the eve of the all-weather synthetic surface was installed at the University of Iowa, the baseball team prepared for its upcoming season. The new field, complete with lights and seating, was set to make its debut with a doubleheader against the University of Illinois. The Hawk pitchers, led by ace Steve Morton, were confident in their ability to shine on the new surface.
