Action Needed in ATS

The second edict of Webster’s Unabridged Dictionary defines "ATS" as: "one committed to an extreme view or position, especially to the extent of being systemic or total." It's a bit of a mouthful, but the meaning is clear: if you're ATS, you're committed to something that's extreme, and you're willing to fight for it.

So, what does this mean for the future of ATS? It means that we need to take action to ensure that the extreme views of ATS are not allowed to dictate our future. We need to stand up for our values and our ideas, and we need to be willing to fight for them.

Opportunity Knocks Once

On a recent Tuesday, November 7, the mayor of Chicago, Lori Lightfoot, announced a new initiative to increase the number of affordable housing units in the city. As someone who has been involved in the housing crisis for many years, I applaud this move.

However, it's important to remember that the issue of affordable housing is not a new one. In fact, it's been a long-standing problem in Chicago, and it's one that we need to address as a community.

I often think of the saying, "If you don't stand up for what you believe in, who will?" This is especially true when it comes to affordable housing. We need to stand up for our community and work together to create a more equitable future.

Boss Named IIT Captain

by Harvey Schults

The President of the Associated Student Body of the Illinois Institute of Technology has announced that, effective immediately, he has appointed Edward J. Meade as the new president of the ASB. Meade, who has been a member of the ASB since 1975, takes over the position vacated by former ASB president, Robert F. Bolen.

Meade, a senior in the school of engineering, has been active in student affairs and has served as vice president of the ASB for the past two years. He has also been involved in various extracurricular activities, including the engineering honor society, Tau Beta Pi, and the National Society of Black Engineers.

Meade's appointment has been met with widespread approval by students and faculty alike. "We are pleased to have someone of Edward's caliber leading our student body," said Dr. John F. Schults, president of IIT. "His leadership and commitment to the Institute will be a valuable asset to our institution."
