When President Retallack resigned in December 1972, ITT, IIT, and IIT, it was the merger of Argonne National Laboratory and the nuclear isotope of the Atomic Energy Commission, not the former Illinois Technological Institute. He had come to IIT as a part-time professor in 1950, and in 1955, he was appointed to the full-time faculty. In 1960, he was named the president of IIT, a position he held until 1972.

Education

On August 15, 1931, John T. Retallack moved to Bloomington, Illinois, where he matriculated at Illinois State University. He received his bachelor's degree in degrees in engineering from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign in 1935, and in 1936, he earned a master's degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. In 1938, he returned to the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign to pursue a Ph.D. in mechanical engineering, and in 1940, he was awarded the Ph.D. degree.

Career

During the war years, Retallack worked as an instructor in mathematics at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and later at the U.S. Naval Training Center in Chicago. After the war, he joined the faculty of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he taught courses in mechanical engineering. In 1946, he was appointed as an assistant professor of mechanical engineering, and in 1950, he was named an associate professor. In 1955, he was named a full professor of mechanical engineering. In 1960, he was named the president of IIT, a position he held until 1972.

Retirement

Following his retirement from IIT, Retallack continued to be involved in the university, serving as a consultant to the administration and as a member of various committees. He also served as an advisor to several students and as a mentor to younger faculty members.

Legacy

Retallack's impact on IIT was significant, and his legacy endures today. His contributions to the university and his role in shaping its future are remembered and celebrated.

The Legal Opportunities Scholarship Program grants awards to those who have demonstrated excellence in their academic and extracurricular pursuits. The program aims to provide financial assistance to students who may not otherwise have the opportunity to pursue higher education. It is designed to increase diversity and promote access to higher education for underrepresented populations.

The program offers scholarships to students who have shown exceptional academic performance, leadership, and commitment to social justice. The scholarships are awarded based on a competitive process, and recipients are selected by a panel of judges who review applicants' academic records, extracurricular activities, and personal essays.

In the current academic year, there are several scholarships available through the program. Some of the scholarships are dedicated to specific fields of study, such as STEM or social sciences, while others are open to all majors.

Eligibility requirements vary depending on the scholarship, but generally, applicants must be enrolled in a degree-granting program at a recognized college or university. They must also demonstrate financial need and have a strong academic record.

Overall, the Legal Opportunities Scholarship Program is an excellent opportunity for students who are committed to making a difference in the world and who need financial assistance to pursue their academic goals.

Contaminated water in the community of Jackson, Mississippi, has raised concerns about the safety of drinking water in the area. The water contains high levels of arsenic, a carcinogenic chemical, which can cause health problems such as skin lesions, internal organ damage, and an increased risk of cancer.

Local residents have complained about the taste and smell of the water, and many have reported health issues, including skin rashes, headaches, and nausea. The state Department of Environmental Quality has advised residents to boil their water for at least one minute before drinking it.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has established a health advisory level of 10 parts per billion (ppb) for arsenic in drinking water. Any level of arsenic above this threshold poses a health risk to consumers.

The situation has sparked protests and calls for action from local officials and community leaders. The state has committed to providing bottled water to those affected by the contamination, but residents are demanding a permanent solution.

The Mississippi Department of Health is currently conducting tests to determine the source of the contamination. It is expected to take several weeks to complete the investigation, and preliminary results suggest that the contamination may be coming from an old landfill.

The state has launched an investigation to determine the responsible party and has issued a cease-and-desist order to the landfill operator. The operator has been given 30 days to clean up the site and comply with environmental regulations.

In the meantime, the state has advised residents to avoid using their tap water for drinking, cooking, or other uses. They are encouraged to use bottled water or purifiers approved by the state.

The residents of the affected area have formed a task force to advocate for their rights and ensure that the contamination does not go unnoticed.

The task force is working with local officials to establish a permanent solution, including the provision of clean water, the cleanup of the site, and compensation for affected residents.

The task force is also calling for federal assistance to address the contamination and ensure that the residents' health and safety are protected.

Letters

Dear Sirs,

It is the responsibility of the editor to select, without prejudice, if a letter is to be printed or not. Sometimes, a letter is not printed because it is not written competently or its contents are unworthy. This is not only the editor's responsibility but also that of the writer. I write to object to the practice of allowing comments on the ZIPPY strip to be printed. VARIOUS ARTISTS is a collaborative effort in which I was associated in the past and I believe that any comments on the strip are a distortion of the work and not an improvement. I have written to the editor and advised him that I do not wish my name associated with any comments on the strip. I hope that this advice will be followed. I have written to VARIOUS ARTISTS in the past and advised them of the same. I hope that this advice will be followed.

End of an Era

It would take a thousand hands with a thousand fingers each to count the incredible number of words which have been spoken about the era of the eighties. Too many words have been spoken in praise of the era of the eighties. Too many words have been spoken in criticism of the era of the eighties. Too many words have been spoken in fear of the era of the eighties. Too many words have been spoken in love of the era of the eighties. But no matter what words we speak or write, the era of the eighties is coming to an end. This is not a cause for celebration, but for reflection. The era of the eighties was a time of change, a time of uncertainty, a time of hope, and a time of despair. It was a time of both joy and pain. It was a time of both success and failure. It was a time of both triumph and defeat. It was a time of both乐观 and pessimism. It was a time of both light and darkness. It was a time of both life and death. It was a time of both joy and sorrow. McCartney Fumbles New Single

by James Mathers

Single "TH III IIY"/"C Moon" - When you consider the fact that both of these songs are written by Paul McCartney, it is surprising that both of them are barely audible on the record. The former is a bit more catchy, but the latter falls flat. McCartney's vocals are not his usual high standard, and the music is lacking in originality. The overall sound is meandering, with no real standout moments.

Getting down to the songs themselves, "TH III IIY" is a weaker track with good vocals and a basic beat. It's straightforward and has a simple structure. The second song, "C Moon," is a bit more complex, with some interesting chord progressions. However, the vocals are not as strong as they could be, and the overall song feels a bit anemic.

Weekend Finals...

There is no one single wrong thing about Needs. The music is a bit too soft and the rhythm is a bit off. It's a bit too melodic, and the overall sound is a bit too sugary. The vocals are a bit thin and lack depth, and the song feels a bit too generic.

Most finals take place inside of buildings. Most students live in the buildings in which the finals are held. Therefore, they must relocate their belongings to the vicinity of the appropriate building. It is here they encounter obstacles to their movement, which impede their progress. The road blocks are set, and the students must push past them. One of the most common obstacles is the use of the bicycle as a means of transportation. The students must dismount and push their bikes around the road blocks to reach their final destinations. This can be quite a challenge, especially in the cold weather conditions.

It was very cold Saturday, and windy. The kind of day you can feel the shiver through your skin even if you're not going between Warmdust and the Commons. Unfortunately, I found my door in the Tunnel in the closed and locked mode (see previous paragraph). It gave me a cold feeling. The inescapable light bulb in the center of the room was a bad reflection of my own condition. I had a feeling I was about to leave.

Forgetting all about the cold, I decided to try a different approach.

The light switch was still on, but the room was dark. I dug in my pockets and pulled out a small flashlight. It was weak, but it was better than nothing. I turned it on and began to explore the room, methodically checking every角落 (corner). There was nothing of interest. I was about to give up when I noticed a small, handwritten note stuck to the wall with a piece of tape. It read:

"Help. I'm trapped here. Please help."

I hesitated for a moment, wondering if I should trust this note. But I knew I had to do something. I went back to the Student Union and called Campus Security. They arrived within minutes and rescued me from the locked room. I was grateful to have been saved, but also a little embarrassed for having to call for help. It was a reminder that we are all vulnerable and that we need to be prepared for any situation.
Announcements

The Chicago Transit Authority, in a fit of budget shenanigans, decided to close the entrance to the Lake–Owen stop. This is just an added insult to the injury that a great many Transit employees will feel in their paychecks when the CTA forms are increased effective as of February 4. An unnamed representative of the Transit Information Center of the CTA gave the reason for the shutdown as: “There wasn’t much people coming in. I told him with his boarding and batting, he gave a plan that expanded so he didn’t need to pay the order of buses, please. If you don’t need the service cut, please, may be you don’t pay more money with expected fare just with poor maintenance of CTA vehicles and facilities, if you want to retreive your proper service, perhaps we can’t find the next step and his romance there has turned the nut.” “This is not what we expected,” the CTA employee said, “and we can’t keep up with the demand of other services.”

To avoid further confusion, the CTA employee has advised the public to call Buss’s line, 6226, which operates a shuttle service.

Defend Yourself

Media. The word refers to any means of communication between two or more people. You are surrounded by media of various kinds every minute of your life. You live in a world where virtually everyone yells at you with an invisible arm of information every second of your life. You are immersed in a constant flood of television, radio, magazines and newspapers, lacking in an unfolding deluge of messages which can make someone somewhere else feel you are screaming at you every second if you only listen. Billboards, TV commercials, radio disk jockeys — they only have one purpose. They want you to listen. Media is repressed the single force which plays the biggest role in motivating people in 1973 America. It represents the most powerful tool for manipulating people that exists. It is the most effective means of making somebody else do what you want them to do.

How would you like to have one of your dreams come true? There are two on this campus which would like you to come down and see them. You are reading a newspaper which we all assembled by a group of students who want you to read the newspaper in a certain way. You are reading an article whose sole purpose is to encourage you to do, to push you into joining the newspaper staff. We are not trying to manipulate you or this very second.

There is a radio station which spends two hours each day trying to reach young listeners. It is a very powerful way of putting an emotion in a person, and the people at WIT are working hard to do this.
First Place Hawks Defend MIBC Lead

by Harry Seabrook

If its the heart start tabloid the JFT bowling team is making a solid bid for the present of the Midwest Intercampus Bowling Conference (MIBC). At the midway point of the season the Hawks are six points clear of the pack. They have a four game lead and have a chance to win the MIBC title, which will come in handy when the conference begins in the spring. If they maintain their present form, they could win the title. The Hawks finished fourth in the MIBC meet, behind the University of Illinois, Northwestern, and Michigan. The Hawks are looking forward to the next meet and hope to win the MIBC title. Ballett Petite and Eun-Crisco (142 points) are all evidence that the team remains with talent. To win consistently, however, a squad must have depth, and this is where the Hawks look. Once they get the depth, Coach Barbara is confident the Hawks will be a tougher, much-improved team.

This year's Hawks, a young bunch, have five new varsity records, with more to come during their last season and spring break. The Young Dutch bowled five members of the varsity parade. Effley leads the team with 32 points, followed by Seabrook with 29. Murray and Seabrook are IT's co-captains. Five more weeks on the IT schedule, with the next one being February 8th.
