Campus Security Defended

The Bog Is No More...

The technology news section of the September 15, 1972 issue of Illinois Institute of Technology's news publication, Illinois Institute of Technology, Chicago, Illinois, 60616. The content includes articles on campus security, a report on a technology exhibition, and a feature on a sculpture artist at the Institute.

Campus Security Defended

Last year there were 867 separate occurrences reported to the Campus Police. These figures cover the period from September 1, 1971 to August 31st, 1972. Most of these were relatively minor problems such as truancy or some other minor offense. However, they involved more serious crimes such as purse snatching, mugging and car theft.

In response to complaints from students about security on campus, T. Whitaker, Assistant to the Dean of Students, addressed the issue in a speech to student groups and the police department.

At night, the CIT campus is patrolled by a minimum of three men, two in a squad car and one on foot. These three are in constant contact with each other by radio. In addition, there is one man patrolling the halls outside the buildings on campus.

There are usually a total of two to five men patrolling the campus area at night, but an absolute maximum of five is not achieved. According to Mr. Clark and Mr. Wurtz, some men may call in sick at the last minute and there is no replacement for their duty.

The Chief of Campus Police also described the job as being very dangerous. He stated that there was a "primary interest in the protection of the students." The emphasis was on security and safety, especially at night.

The Bog Is No More...

Lack of student participation has forced IT's housing office to take action. The Bog, a term used to describe the housing facility, is the only building on campus that is open at night. The housing office has implemented several measures to improve safety and security.

Firstly, the housing office has increased the number of security personnel on duty during the night hours. Secondly, all students are required to lock their doors at all times, and are advised to report any suspicious activity immediately.

The housing office is also considering the installation of security cameras in key areas of the building. This will provide additional surveillance and deter any potential intruders.

The housing office is committed to ensuring the safety and security of all students living in the Bog. They are working tirelessly to create a safe and secure living environment for all residents.
New Grading System
Now in Effect

by R. Miltarek

This semester, all ITT students will be using a new grading system under the new ARDC-No Credit grading system that was approved last spring. The new system eliminates the grades of "P," "F" and replaces it with a grade of "NC," whereby the student receives no credit for the course and must take it over again. All courses the student takes regardless of major, except for one course each semester which he may take under the Pass-No Credit option. All other courses will be graded as "A," "B" and "C." The student must either withdraw or perform inadequately to qualify for any course credit. ITT grades are not used in calculating the student's Grade Point Average and only indicate that the student receives no course credit.

A grade of "F" may also be given in place of a letter grade or "NC." This grade stands for incomplete work, and indicates the course was not completed. The student must complete his work in order to receive his grade and to receive his certificate. The student can use the option to take the course again, but the only grade he can receive from the test is "NC" for failure.

The newly appointed systems engineering professor, will then examine the results of this new grading system and may change it to a different system. The new ARDC grading system has been in place since the beginning of this semester, and is also being used for the summer session.

PRINCETON, NEW JERSEY September 11, 1972
College seniors preparing to leave campus may now obtain the National Teacher Examinations on a stand-alone basis. The following four tests are now available for purchase:

- "The Teacher's Guide" on the mechanics of teaching
- "The Counselor's Guide" on the mechanics of counseling
- "The Social Worker's Guide" on the mechanics of social work
- "The Administrator's Guide" on the mechanics of administration

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts, as one of several factors in the selection of teachers and by several colleges, for specific advice on which examinations to take and on when courses should be taken.

The Bulletin of Information for College Students contains a list of test centers, and information about the examinations. Information is available at the Registration Office of the college. Copies may be obtained from college placement offices, school public relations departments, or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Box 91, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

Chapel Ministry Sponsors Personal Growth Weekend

A Personal Growth Weekend for ITT students and their friends will be conducted September 22-24. This is the first of two difference weekends that will be sponsored by the Campus Ministry.

The weekend is for students to have their own identities and to express their own feelings and feelings. The weekend is for students who are interested in exploring their own selves and expressing their own feelings.

This weekend will be led by John WillNX, Campus Minister at ITT, and Reuben Gold, a popular singer, and an educator and group leader. Participants will be given an opportunity to get to the core of any personal or group issues they want to work out.

This weekend is an opportunity for people to explore the core of their own feelings and experiences. To express their feelings more spontaneously. There will be a lot of opportunities for people to "try on" new styles of behavior and to get feedback about how they are coming across to others.

The weekend will be held at the ITT Chapel on Fri., Sat., and Sun., and will be open to the public.

For further information about the weekend, call the ITT Campus Ministry at 2-7700, or write to the ITT Chapel at 2-7769. The ITT Chapel will be open on Fri., Sat., and Sun., at 7:30 p.m. The weekend will be open to the public and free of charge.

The Chicago Public Library has a main branch right here in the South Loop area, called "Lyric 72," which is all-24-hour hours. They're here used as a moral or religious term, but mainly used in the legal form, in almost all the legal systems around the world. They're planned to be clear and all people to know, and fact is, are.

The right of a citizen to control his or her own body is deeply rooted in the legal history of the United States. The Constitution of the United States, in its Fifth Amendment, says that private individuals cannot be forced to do anything which infringes upon the rights of all people.

One of the first statements on human rights was made in the United States, even though it was not an official statement. The entire spirit of the new nation is reflected in the Declaration of Independence, which says that these truths are to be self-evident; that all men are created equal; that they are endowed with certain unalienable rights; that a government which is founded on these truths is just.

The states have a wide variety of anti-abortion laws, ranging from abortion on demand to a general ban on abortion for any reason. It's perfectly clear from the Declaration of Independence that the founders considered the life of a woman to be one of the most crucial elements of every human being. This is inherently illegal to deny an abortion which could save the life of a woman. Such restrictions violate the constitutional rights of all women.

The federal government has ruled that the Constitution does not authorize the federal government to impose any restrictions on abortion. The Supreme Court has decided that the right to privacy extends to the right to make decisions regarding reproductive matters.

No court action, no legal action can or could invalidate or invalence or invalidation. The procedure is to be determined by the woman in consultation with her physician and, as far as possible, by those who are closest to her.

The right to privacy is a fundamental right of every woman, and the decision to have an abortion is a personal one that should be made by the woman and her doctor, not by the law or the state.
Students Lose-Again

When the decision to close down the Bog was made at the beginning of this semester, it marked another step in IIT's steady decline in student services that has been going on for several years now. Closing out for the campus supermarket has been moved up every year almost like clockwork, and students have all but given up on it.

The shabby financial situation of the college due to declining enrollments, higher prices for goods and services, the business slump, etc., can only be deplored. The people in charge of running IIT have the newspaper's sympathy.

Nevertheless, fiscal problems do not release this university from its basic responsibility to the students. With the Bog closed, there is no hot food service available on campus after six-thirty in the evening. This means people on campus, particularly evening students, have been deprived on the little services left that were not shut down immediately by five o'clock sharp every afternoon. Now they have virtually no thing.

Admittedly, a lot of students did not make use of the Bog as much as they should have, especially the dormitory residents by closing the Bog, however, IIT may be compounding its problems, for this will encourage the students to spend their dollars elsewhere off-campus. The money is there, and if anyone can see from the activity of pizza and restaurant deliverymen constantly roaming the dorm floors.

The very least IIT can do to compensate for this drop in service is to provide people in the Hub with cheaper prizes in the vending machines, a wider variety of vending machines, perhaps a way to heat up the food, such as a microwave oven.

As for the dorm students ore concerned, it really couldn't hurt in the long run to keep the Commons open an hour or two after the evening as an experiment.

Whatever is done, should be done now, not a few months or next semester. By that time everything will have settled down to "normal," and the Bog will be just one more memory of "the good old days."

Keep Us Alive

The IIT campus is protected at night by a police force consisting of three and six men. It is the opinion of this newspaper that this is not enough. While the concept of a "small but dedicated" police force on campus is certainly a good one, we feel that this is at best an idealistic approach to a problem which requires a costly realistic solution.

The chief of the Campus Police says that the only barrier to a larger and better equipped police force is money in the Institute. While it is certainly true that enrollment has been down recently, causing money to be rather scarce, there is no escape from the fact that a school which fails to adequately protect its student's needs a reordering of its priorities. If it is necessary to cut funds from some other department, that is regrettable. But it is less regrettable than the current rush of weekly robberies and purse snatchings.

Even so, the men of the campus police are to be congratulated for the number of suspects they have arrested in connection with personal assaults. This is especially true in light of the small size of the nightly patrol force.

This past summer, the month of July saw seven assaults on campus, but out of these the Campus Police force made a total of six arrests. This is impressive, but it must be remembered that inadequate funding of the Campus Police those six assaults might have never happened in the first place.

An addition of even one officer to the night shift could save the existing force from the needlessly drudgery of writing parking tickets for illegally parked cars. This would allow the regular force to spend all their time patrolling the campus. One extra man could be used to prevent shoplifting in the Campus Mart, (see last week's issue). One extra man might be stationed near the CTA elevated tracks, where the overwhelming majority of strong arm robberies and purse snatchings take place.

One extra man might even be put to work patrolling the campus when the rest of the IIT police force is on duty. One alternative to "beating up" the campus security might be the adoption of a program similar to "Project Whistle-Stop." This program, which originated in Hyde Park, involves the distribution of special whistles to all local residents, or, in our case, students, that can be used to summon police in case of emergencies.

The administration might well do to consider the feasibility of a student security force to assist the Campus Police. Such a group would be used to keep an eye on the campus, especially at night, and immediately report anything suspicious or unusual to the campus police. A student force would certainly be cheaper than an addition of even one extra man to the police force.

Of course, the job of setting up such a student group would be monumental. There would be problems to work out, not the least of which would be protection of the student "campus guards" themselves. (Although having them work in small groups of two or three might be a partial answer to that question.) But there can be no real solution to such an admittedly difficult problem. One learns quickly not to think in terms of ideas which can be contested by an armored robber in a dark isolated corner of the campus. Instead one learns to think in terms of solutions now.

Dear Editor,

I am not trying to apologize for the Mu- slim students, nor do I think the all- islamists have apologized for Israel. I believe a lot of people were verySave this idea to your profile to access it later.

Dear Editor,

The September 18 issue of Technology News carried a couple of editorials that sounded hate and prejudice against the Arabs. As much as I condemn violence as a way to solve a problem, people must try to understand that when a cat is cornered it will claw. So I call on you to fight for it to go away.

There would have been expected the editorials to depict the explosion that caused a Japa- nese flash in a couple of months ago where over eighty people perished a savagery which the Israeli service destroyed. The JDL claimed credit for. And it is in that respect that I like to give you a peace of the magazine.

The editorials in all other issues, have mentioned the savagery of Israel in its daily torture of prisoners in Dachau, I think that should pass into history.

The release of these prisoners should not be a cause for the Muslims to go on a ramp. The Muslims should have mentioned something about the fate of one and a half million refugees, mostly women, and not allowed to go back, and another half million blacks being thrown into slave-like, and even increasing number of concet. Jews are not being blown up, and their sons and brothers shit in front of their eyes.

Question: Do you feel that security at Tech is adequate?

Mike Seter  RE 03
I think it's adequate. I haven't lost anything yet. I'm waiting for them to tow my car away though.

Jerry Reekie  ID 01
I think the security is adequate so far.

Steven Browning  Ch E 06
For the most part I do. I have no grievances with the security here. They are not too far away and are trying to do their job. Sometimes there's harassment at night. They may see a person walking on the campus and ask if he attends here. Does he work here? Does he have some function here?

Biondo Tisqiao  Arch 01
I think the campus police have been patrolling quite a bit, and I think they do a pretty good job. I really haven't had any experiences. But it seems to me right now it's pretty good.

Gerry Krause  Mark 07
I really can't say because I live at home, so I'm not on campus at night. I've never had any bad experiences at all.

Robert Batscheb  Enr E 01
I think the patrolling should be increased. One night I noticed that a patrol car was just protecting one place. I think they should be patrolling all around the campus, because the students are all around the campus and you never can tell where danger is.

Nancy Karr  Bsc 08
No! Certainly not. I was shopping at the campus police to see if we could get just escort service to the "E" stations, but also have armed escorts while we are riding the trains.

Glancy: Progress Keystone of IIT Athletics

by Harvey Schultz

Glancy: I have always loved the competitive spirit of athletics; to me, sports, when properly conducted, is a clean, physically and mentally healthy form of entertainment.

Schultz: Finally, Coach, in view of all the trouble sports have gone through, is there any hope that sports can ever again be just a mirror of the life of our society?

Glancy: This is a loaded question. Indeed, I have never really had a considered answer. It seems to me that the whole question of athletics is related to the question of education number one-ten as its basic goal. In the pursuit of being number one-ten.

With Coach Rich (Fireball) Klein in the background, IIT Techskechath coach Steve Martin explains among others during Fall Basketleague practice session on the IIT Athletic Field. The Techskeches will face St. Xavier College in a doubleheader here tomorrow, with the first game beginning at 10:00 am. With 21 players participating, Coach Klein and assistant Rick Steinman are pleased with the progress made by the young Techskech team, who continue practice daily on the Athletic Field.

Glancy: There are many schools that are interested in the things that happen here for the educational gains that we are interested in. And there is no problem that we have that we can't solve by talking something over with a group of people.

Schultz: You mean that the collegiate level - double adhesions standards? Fresh air courses, crowded room, better athletic facilities, and a better athletic program, with the least of any material? I think we have a problem with the least of any material.

Glancy: From my point of view, there is little hope at the present time that there can be any normal sports until the universities take the leadership and declare a meaningful definition of what role interscholastic athletics should portray in the overall educational process. As sports for the students, or sports for the general public, and a training ground for the professional life?

This question must be answered.

Alumni Assoc. Hosts Annual Golf Outing

(ITT University Relations) Alumni of Illinois Institute of Technology held the IIT Alumni Association's fourth annual John J. Schmoller Golf Outing yesterday at the Cag Hill Country Club in Downers, Illin.

A special guest was Bernard "Bunny" Wiesman, who retired last year after 43 years with the IIT Athletic Department. (Editor's Note: Mr. Wiesman spent 43 years in the IIT Athletic Department, the last 22 of them as Athletic Director.)

Wiesman, long active in the sports world, came from his Florides’ home to visit with alumni, many of whom participated in IIT athletics as students under his direction.

Following dinner, IIT Alumni Association president William W. Poles discussed his experiences in the 1968 Olympic Star "class" sailing competition. Parkes was the bronze medal winner that year. "The Boats were meant for golfers for low and low outcare.

IIT's golf outing was named for Schmoller Room of Kinetakes. Starting at 12:15 pm, all participants were asked to attend. The wind was warm and cloudy over the weekend. In order to be in top shape for the 1967 season.
