Student Cops at Tech

It is an accepted fact that the complexity of the IT system can be a challenge. Recently, people have found that the area surrounding the academic buildings can also be dangerous to those who are curious. Students have been mugged in the area between Professor Hall and the Common. They have been robbed in the parking lots. They have been accosted while walking to the CTA stations.

Chief Jim Clark, of the campus police, has repeatedly stated that the IT security force would be more effective if the targets were not tied up with petty theft as well as writing notes for it illegally parked cars. Standing watch at the entrance, trying to prevent students from playing ball on the grass outside the dorms and class buildings. A new plan was put into effect February 12 that has already resulted in a significant decrease in crime.

In an interview with Clark, he stated, "We are working part time for the campus police force in an attempt to decrease crime on campus."

Hand picked by Athletic Director Bill Green, the three students are patrolling the inner campus.

Change in Grading System Proposed

The grading system at Tech has undergone a significant change. The old system, which was based on a scale of 1.0 to 4.0, has been replaced by a new system that uses a scale of 0.5 to 5.0. This change has been made in an effort to improve student performance and to reduce the amount of stress associated with grades.

The new grading system has been met with mixed reactions on campus. Some students have expressed concern that the new system will be more difficult to understand, while others have praised it for its simplicity. The university administration has assured students that they will be provided with ample training and support to help them adjust to the new system.

The new grading system is scheduled to be implemented at the beginning of the fall semester, and students will be expected to adjust to the new scale by the end of the school year.

Students Help Old St. James

Carnival setup, opened, was the result of hard work by a group of students, led by the faculty of Old St. James Academy. The students worked hard to ensure a successful event, and the carnival was a great success.

The event was held to raise funds for Old St. James, a school that is struggling with budget constraints. The funds raised will be used to support the school's programs and facilities.

Cancelled Drive Hits Blood Center

The recent cancellation of the Triangles' annual blood drive has caused concern among the Tech community. The drive was scheduled to be held in the gymnasium on February 15, but was canceled due to a lack of blood drive volunteers.

The cancellation has raised concerns about the impact on the blood supply, as the Triangles are one of the main organizations that regularly host blood drives on campus. The university administration has stated that they will work to reschedule the drive as soon as possible, and are urging students to consider donating blood in the meantime.

TN Inspects Misplaced Physiognomy

by Annette D. Smith

The University of Tennessee press release this week stated that the campus security forces are searching for a suspect who has been misplacing Physiognomy class assignments. The incident began last Monday when the professor discovered that the assignments were missing from her office. Security personnel on campus were immediately notified, and a search was initiated.

"We are unable to determine the whereabouts of the assignments," said University spokesperson John D. Smith. "Our security forces are working diligently to locate them, but we are seeking the public's help as well. If you have any information regarding the missing assignments, please contact the University's security department."
Past and Present Shock

by Edward Ollinick

With all due respect to Alvin Toffler, the author of Future Shock, this unqualified experience with the whereabouts of IT, other wise known as the movie "Future Throat," was an unexpected and disheartening event for all concerned. It is a story of human error, and the failure to understand the implications of technology on our lives.

In the past, when technology was introduced, it was often met with skepticism. People were wary of the unknown and the potential for it to go wrong. The same is true today, as we are confronted with the rapid pace of technological change. The movie "Future Throat" is a cautionary tale, reminding us of the importance of careful consideration before implementing new technologies.

The movie follows the story of a group of scientists who have developed a new technology that promises to revolutionize the way we live. However, as they begin to implement the technology, they fail to consider the potential consequences. The result is a chain of events that leads to the destruction of the city where the technology was first tested.

The movie serves as a warning to us, as we continue to strive for technological advancement. It reminds us of the importance of considering the potential consequences of our actions, and of working together to ensure that technology is used for the betterment of all.

In the end, the story of "Future Throat" is one of hope. It shows that even in the face of great challenges, we can work together to create a better future. It is a call to action, urging us to be vigilant and to be proactive in our approach to technology.

In conclusion, "Future Throat" is a powerful reminder of the importance of considering the potential consequences of our actions. It serves as a cautionary tale, reminding us to be vigilant and to work together to ensure that technology is used for the betterment of all.

Students Score Success Without Administration "Help"

The students of IIT who organized and participated in last Friday's clean up, paint up campaign at the St James parish hall proved once again that IIT can be an integral part of the neighborhood community if the proper effort is made.

To be perfectly correct, however, one should say "IIT students," rather than "IIT," since they were the only participants in the project. By comparison with the blood drive, this effort went along very smoothly and efficiently. Completely on their own and unharmonized by administrative supervision and approval, the students got things done, with no qualifications.

It was an excellent opportunity for the IIT administration to step back and watch what the student can do without them. And watch they did, as evidenced by the arrival of the IIT University Relations people (IIT PR).

Granted that the situations were not identical, it still makes one stop to wonder why students can accomplish what students and school cannot. A serious re-examination of the decision-making structures at IIT may be in order.

Perhaps a segment of the people of IIT may think the repeated reference to the blood drive is being a dead horse, but university efforts to make public relations "pay" of the St. James project so soon after the drive cancellation must not be ignored or rationalized away.

Technology News again congratulates the workers, but realizes that most of those people already have all the satisfaction they need, the satisfaction that comes from a job well done.

Editor's Note

In connection with your current series of pictures and articles on life at IIT as revealed in back issues of Technology News, may I remind you that the Kemper Library has a complete file of the paper dating back to 1929, when it was Armour Tech News.

Dad Scott

Anyone on campus it welcome to come in and browse through these old papers at any time, though of course after 5 p.m. it is best to give us a call earlier in the day.

Beware the Blood Driven

I read the story about the projected blood drive on page 3 and was glad to see that there will be an opportunity for students to give what they can.

I would like to point out that no one should be forced to donate blood. It is a personal decision that should be made only after careful thought and consideration.

Sincerely,

"CIN-A-ROCK" COMES TO TOWN
The egg has cracked many times... for a long time, I've been trying to understand the events leading up to this point. It's not clear what caused it, but there are a few possibilities. The egg may have been subjected to extreme heat or pressure, which could cause it to crack. Alternatively, it could have been broken by a sudden impact, such as a drop or a blow. The egg may also have been exposed to chemicals or other substances that could cause it to break down. In any case, the event is now over, and the egg is now in pieces. It's important to understand the circumstances surrounding this event, as it could have significant implications. It's also important to learn from this experience and take steps to prevent similar events from happening in the future.

Traffic Jam

by Anthony Basanta

Traffic, in an animal are somewhat to the French horn special istic. Jacques Tati. While the work doesn’t avoid the usual absurdities, it contains more of actuality. The film is, in a way, the most important and it might illustrate the viewer from inside a night. The heart of the humor result in seeing everyday things look when they’re viewed objectively. The techniques include slow-motion studies of huffing people, shots of absent-minded attitudes, exaggerations of situations, and, of course, absurdity.

Director Tati himself plays the proverbial “nate guy,” Mr. Habs, who is the designer of the world’s most unlikely; an automobile—a van which is virtually a mason. It has an electric shaver hidden in the steering wheel, the grille is used to grill steak, the whole construction stretches out for the night.

In the end, you create a funny movie. There just doesn’t seem to be enough material to keep-up the humorous. If I’m missing here is the Van long enough to bring the humor to some extent. It could be made funnier.

Mr. Tati’s films are, in effect, an everyday-looking glumness. A story in disguise. The objective is to show the gals from Paris to the international show in Amsterdam. The problems are traffic, customs officers, the handling driver, and just plain everyday absurdity you can imagine.

Nothing comes easy in sports, and the Hawkins trials and tribulations this year in school activities is an indication that more hard work is needed. As much as what work is involved in the current level of work for the team physically must be given the school and time wise, the Hawkins could be getting back more time for the next season. These dedicated hardworking pucketers are to be commended for their work this season and are encouraged to go on in better things in 1974.
