Polish Letter Bomb Scare

On Wednesday, October 31, 1931, a handcrafted, cleverly constructed letter bomb was delivered to the Technology News office with the morning mail. The bomb was discovered by Richard Anderson as he was sorting through the mail. Anderson noticed a strange looking envelope coming from an unrecognizable person. He opened the envelope and was shocked by the situation. After an in-depth discussion, they finally decided that letters would call HIC Bombe Squad, which proceeded to do so.

After several unsuccessful attempts, the letter bomb was safely removed from the office. No one was injured in the process. The bomb was then taken to the Illinois Institute of Technology, where it was examined and found to be safe.

The HIC Bombe Squad currently operates as a part of the Technology News office. They are trained and equipped to handle any potential threats. They work tirelessly to ensure the safety of the institution.

The incident serves as a reminder of the importance of cybersecurity and the need for constant vigilance. We at the Technology News are committed to providing a safe and secure environment for our staff and students.

The Guru Sahib's Dale Tog set up shop at the door of the Illinois Institute of Technology News office. He was stirring up quite a bit of excitement, as he sat there with a big smile, waving his arms and gesturing wildly.

"Guru Sahib, Guru Sahib," the crowd chanted, "What are you talking about?"

The Guru Sahib, who was dressed in traditional Guru Sahib attire, sighed and shook his head.

"I am talking about the importance of education," he said, waving his arms again.

The crowd was silent for a moment, unsure what to make of the Guru Sahib's words.

"And the importance of meditation," he continued, "for only through meditation can we find true peace and contentment in life."

The Guru Sahib then took his place at the center of the room, and the crowd fell silent, listening intently to his words.

The Guru Sahib's Dale Tog was a favorite among the students, and he was often seen walking around the campus with his arms out, speaking to anyone who would listen.

"I am here to teach you about the importance of meditation," he would say, "and to show you that there is more to life than just the material world."
For Nix

We support President Richard M. Nixon in his time of need. Any right-thinking citizen should recognize the inherent power and authority this man embodies. We should all rally behind him, for he is our leader.

Too many eager beaver reporters are looking on the bright side of things when they talk about the President, but not here. Technology News, Mr. Nixon blessed this country, among other things, with the Russian wheat deal. So what if several likely and conspiratorial deals made millions off the deal, so what if there was a wheel shortage in this country which caused urea prices to go up. So what if this grain shortage caused a textile shortage which caused a sylbean shortage which raised the prices of pork, chicken, beef and A1 steak sauce. These things are unimportant to the average housewife. She never knew what two chickens in every pot meant anyway.

We agree with the President that the Watergate hearings on TV are a rabble rousing nuisance. With this trat to the people is Ms. Joan Q. Public supposed to find out how Ms. Olson solved this week's coffee shortage problem?

To those who rally behind the President, in whom we trust, the man who took crime off the streets and put it in the White House where He could supervise it. Who else would assume such an overwhelming responsibility?

Mr. Nixon will undoubtedly go down in history as the last of the great leaders, a man America owes a lot to.

Crush

Dear Editor:

I can no longer hold it within. My heart is full of passion for you. I can no longer keep these emotions to myself. Last night, I read your poem and was filled with such intense feelings. Your words touched my soul and made my heart swell with love. I have never felt this way about anyone before. I am深深地 in love with you. My feelings for you are so strong and pure. I cannot keep this to myself anymore.

Yours truly,

Crank

Dear Editor and Students of 197?

It is with deep regret that I must announce my resignation as head of the Psychology Department. Unfortunately, circumstances beyond my control have forced this unhappy decision. To date, my wife has given birth to a live horse, the god Jesus has spoken to me in the manifestation of a demented Linokeown, and the next thing I know, I am getting a letter in the mail. This chain of events has led me to believe that the last thing for me to do would be to abandon my worldly life and retire to the peaceful mountain hideaway of mysterious Lake Wartash, as did my mentor, Dr. Smedley, many years ago. Thus, here I say farewell to you all.

Dear Editor:

I can no longer hold it within. My heart is full of passion for you. I can no longer keep these emotions to myself. Last night, I read your poem and was filled with such intense feelings. Your words touched my soul and made my heart swell with love. I have never felt this way about anyone before. I am深深地 in love with you. My feelings for you are so strong and pure. I cannot keep this to myself anymore.

Yours truly,

Next time you see someone polluting, point it out.

It's litter in the streets. It's air that smells. It's a river where fish can't breathe.
You know what pollution is. But not everyone does.
So the next time you see pollution, don't close your eyes to it.
Write a letter. Make a call. Point it out to someone who can do something about it.

People start pollution. People can stop it.

Dorm Life Exposé

Last week the RA's created a questionable party taking place in the dorms. Upon careful examination of the evidence and careful consideration of their alternatives, the RA's finally decided to call the campus police.

The possibility of a night gangsta rap was ruled out in the RA's because loud music meant that rooms could be heard throughout the dorm complex. Nearby residents described the sounds as being similar to either a playground of children or something related to a metronome running around a group of chickens.

The piano, however, did make it to the police, as they were too busy giving parking tickets and taking cars away that belonged to the bottom of the campus hierarchy.

While the campus police were taping away several Darte and Montans, other sympathetic residents from the dorm who lived nearby began showing off their talent and playing in the RA's guarding the room. This distracted the attention of the RA's so much that the party-goers managed to outsmart the police several times and get away.

The theme of the night was to discover new RA's having a party in their room and calling the police to report the noise. The RA's were reading the magazines by candlelight, which was also supplied by the neighboring residents who were then called in to be escorted down the hallways in a candlelight funeral.

The lack of light also made it possible for the party-goers to slip away without revealing their identity, so that nobody knew who they are.

Several minutes later, the two persons who live in the particular room in question came back from a class that they refuse to discuss and were horrified to discover one RA's having a party in their room.

At 2 a.m., the campus police finally showed up. Although they only had cheap polaroid cameras with them, they did manage to get more smiles from the RA's while the flashbulbs were popping away.

After three hours and seventeen minutes, the RA's gave up trying to explain what they were doing in the room and promised that if they didn't have to clean up the room they would never do it again. The two residents of that room were, in turn, warned to keep them from looking.
Walker Reports UFO

Illinois Governor Dan Walker reported an unidentified flying object landed outside the Governor's Mansion in Springfield late Wednesday night. Walker is the fourth governor to see a UFO in the past few weeks.

"It was really a frightening experience, even more frightening than when I found out about Anthony Angelus," Walker said. "I was sitting on the back porch pointing the bazooka that I walked through the street in, trying to think of a way to dispose of Blair when this long shiny black object floated over the lawn. It looked like a Cadillac without wheels."

"Without warning, the doors opened, and this round figure walked out toward me," Walker continued. "I was paralyzed with fear-I couldn't move. I could only stand in awe and wonder with my heart going pitty-pat as it moved toward me."

"It came within two feet of me, stopped for a moment as though it were considered and then pushed its way out of the window."

Brave Dog Saves Man

A brave dog saved a student from certain death early Red Monday when the student had fallen into a parade in the HH B parking lot. The student, Herb, opened the windows and shouted for help.

"Herb saved the day," a bystander said. "He jumped out of the window and ran to the rescue."

"The student was saved, but the parade was ruined."

saturday NOVEMBER 13 8PM HUB 50c WITH I.D.
Ronald Jameau has been named the new president of IIT by the Board of Trustees. Jameau was the unanimous choice of the Presidential Search Committee which was formed to find a replacement for ex-president John T. Bartalino. Bartalino retired at the end of the 1972 university year.

Search committee member Ben Sterling commented, "We were impressed by Jameau's grasp of the situation and ability to relate to the students. He has had experience in both the academic and administrative areas of IIT, and we believe he will be an effective recruiter in the coming years." Jameau's appointment was effective immediately.

Jameau, a native of Chicago, is a graduate of the University of Illinois and holds an M.B.A. degree from Harvard Business School. He has been associated with IIT for 15 years, serving in various capacities including assistant dean of students and director of admissions.

The Board of Trustees agreed that no one with higher qualifications could be found. Jameau's main responsibilities include the development of a new master's program in computer science, the expansion of the business school, and the continued improvement of the university's facilities.
On October 31 of every year, IIT holds its annual bonfire-trailer race on the sidewalks in front of the HUB. This race draws many participants from all over Chicago and is very popular among all the IIT students, especially fourth-year women’s dorms.

The object of the race is for each team to ride its bonfire-trailer around a sidewalk course twelve times without getting collapsed by the lumber. This year each entire team will ride its bonfire all at the same time, since last year there were too many casualties after the entrants reached the back of the ROTC building. The lone survivor crawled back to the starting line with a very inspiring technique, as the crowds cheered him on. This person reported to the judges that the snakes kept fighting over which snake could squeeze the most out of the others.

Because of this incident, this year’s entrants will be armed with a leash and a dog whistle to keep their transportation at bay. It is hoped that the additional weight of having all the team members on the kit will keep the team from collapsing up against anybody in particular too closely.

Last year, after relocating the race sixteen times to replace casualties from the first lap, the race was finally stopped after three laps because the course was getting too messy.

The entry fees were given first prize for bravery beyond the call of duty and the first winners were given second prize for their good sport. It was reported that they all went out that night and got smashed while singing “How Does Your Rose Look?” to a jazzy, sharp instrumental key.

So far this year it is not known whether the race will be held, because there has been very little a year round of fossil rains to affect the fossil conditions.

Census times on the clay complex have failed to produce any signs of any meaning, but there is currently a condition of soil rainfall that has not yet caused any flooding trouble. It has been reported that the next year because of its entries, it will be a great loss to north Chicago’s future of sophistication and culture. (That means IIT).

Everyone on campus will truly feel the loss of this great event.
