Still No President

The Illinois Institute of Technology announced on September 7, 1973, that Samuel A. Spilker, a member of the Senate, had been named president of the university. The announcement came after a series of negotiations with the administration that had lasted for several months. The university had been without a president since the resignation of the previous president, Dr. John J. Conley, in February of 1973.

Spilker, who had been a member of the board of trustees since 1968, had been serving as interim president since the resignation of Conley. The announcement was made by the university's president, Dr. John J. Conley, in a press conference. Spilker was praised for his work as interim president, and his appointment was seen as a vote of confidence in his leadership.

The search for a new president had been plagued by controversy and political intrigue. The search committee, which had been formed to find a new president, had been criticized for its lack of diversity and for the influence of political figures in the process. The appointment of Spilker was seen as a victory for the university's administration, which had been at odds with the search committee.

The news of Spilker's appointment was met with mixed reactions. Some faculty members were pleased with the appointment, while others were concerned about the lack of diversity in the search process. The university's board of trustees, which had approved the appointment, was praised for its decision.

Spilker was born in Chicago in 1930 and received his bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago in 1952. He received his law degree from the University of Chicago in 1955 and his doctorate in political science from the University of Chicago in 1960. He served as a member of the Illinois Senate from 1963 to 1973 and was a candidate for governor of Illinois in 1970.

The announcement of Spilker's appointment was met with a wave of excitement and hope for the future of the university. The university, which had been struggling with financial difficulties and a lack of endowment, was seen as ready for a new leader to guide it through these challenging times.

Spilker promised to work hard to strengthen the university's financial stability and to improve the quality of its education. He pledged to work closely with the faculty, students, and administration to ensure that the university remained a leading institution of higher education.

Union Board Promo Album

Union Board, with the help of radio station WCEU, put together a promo album and distributed it live at the CB Summer Saturday. "The album was aired into our campus according to their schedule," said Nancy Bickerton, who works in the Union Board office. The album included music that was popular with students and faculty members, and it was well-received by the audience.

VA Checks Ready

The Veteran's Administration Regional Office in Chicago has announced that VA benefits checks have been issued for veteran students attending UIC during the fall term. George T. Gibson, Director of the VA Regional Office in Chicago, said that benefits checks are mailed to participating students on a regular basis. Students who have not received their benefits checks should contact the VA Regional Office immediately.

Blood Drive On—At Last

Finally, after nearly five months of waiting, the Triangle-Michie Drive Blood Services booth is to be set up. Now that problems with the insurance companies have been settled and the membership list of all, any one problem remains—getting the message out.

I know that this may sound like a piece of trash, but there is something in it for you. A picnic who donates blood is assured of having a free supply of blood-badgers for his family and himself in the coming year. Anyone who has gone bad has an operation requiring many transfusions, or knows a friend or relative who has had such an operation, knows how expensive blood can be. I urge you to donate. Blood donation is easy as possible. The hospital staff will set up in the Blood Services booth, and will be open between the hours of 9 am and 1 pm on September 17th and 18th. It takes only a few hours to give blood—or hear your sponsor go for a run. It's an easy way to get exercise when you're on the go. You're helping a great cause, and you're getting a free supply of blood-badgers for yourself and your family. So get in line and give blood today!

Win $50 in the Student Directory Cover Design Contest

Design the cover for this year's Student Directory and win $50. All entries are due Sept. 19. Bring your entries to room 206 North Hall. Judging will be done by the Student Directory staff.

The design must be in 2 contrasting colors. (One color for the cover— one color for the design.) Any size paper may be used— however, the size of the actual design must be 5½" x 8¼". The contest is open to all currently enrolled IIT students.
IIT Sports Season Begins

Organizational meetings and fall practices have begun in the university sports program. The men's soccer team has already practiced under coach John Flett. The first two meets will be held Tuesday and Thursday at 4:30, Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 4:30. Many teams will have their first game at 4:30.

The soccer team has begun practice under coach Paul Wood and has been working very hard. Intramural soccer players continued practice this past week since it has been rain-free. Intramural soccer has been added as an extra game for those who don't have enough people for a team game. These games are being held every Tuesday and Thursday at 4:30.

Intramurals by Dave Woodworth
The Intramural Department at IIT continues to sponsor a variety of activities for students, including basketball, volleyball, tennis, and intramural sports. The department is always looking for new members, and interested students are encouraged to join. Intramural sports are open to all IIT students and are a great way to meet new people and stay active.
