Northwestern Co-ed Pays Tuition in Singles

Everyone grips about high college tuition, but Vicki Antonos of Northwestern University did something other than gripe. Winter quarter tuition was due at Northwestern last week. Antonos paid it in one dollar bills. "We've never felt so good about paying tuition," she said. The move was designed as a "personal protest to the rising cost of education."

Northwestern lawyer George P. Hendley refused Antonos's payment the first time. "We don't accept small tender," he said. Hendley instructed Antonos to deposit the money in a bank. Hendley's refusal was illegal, though. Federal law says that legal tender must be accepted as payment for debts, whether it is in banded or not.

The following day, Antonos returned with her shopping bag of one dollar bills and this time the banker's office accepted them. A banker's assistant counted them twice to make sure they were all there. The double counting took 45 minutes.

"I think that if everyone would pay their tuition in one dollar bills, or similarly small denominations, it might show the university how much tuition it is," she said. "Of course, if everyone started doing it, they'd have to hire more people to count it and tuition would have to go up," she added.

The case of Antonos and Hendley is not unique. That same incident occurred here at ITT about two years ago. A fellow came in with 100 one dollar bills and wanted to pay his tuition with them," he said.

IIT Hosts H.S. Students

by John Mikaluk

Chicago area high school students, their parents, and others interested in becoming college students for a day will have an opportunity to attend regular undergraduate classes here at IIT on Monday, February 18, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. (Open class day is held on Washington's birthday, because it is a high school holiday. Students may select the classes they want to attend from a variety of subjects including management, economics, mathematics, humanities, architecture, social sciences, design, physics, and geology.

Students are encouraged to attend these classes to gain an understanding of the educational experiences offered by IIT. The classes will be held in the engineering and physical sciences buildings.

The program includes:

- Management
- Economics
- Mathematics
- Humanities
- Architecture
- Social sciences
- Design
- Physics
- Geology

The program will consist of one class per student, with the opportunity to attend up to two classes per student. Students will be provided with a schedule of classes and a list of faculty members available to answer questions. The schedule will be distributed prior to the event.

The program is designed to provide high school students with a taste of college life and an understanding of the educational opportunities available at IIT. It is open to all high school students in the Chicago area.

For more information, please contact the Office of Admissions at 312-567-3456.
Escapism: American Style

In times of shortages, official corruption, and war, Americans have historically risen to meet the challenges. That's the saying goes, "feed the line and stood up to be counted!"

But not this time. Presently we have those problems mentioned above and, in fact, the old ones (race discrimination, unemployment, crime) and a whole new set of problems that threaten the basic concepts of the American way of life. "Maybe the American way of life should be changed," said one of my local politicos. "But that's not the point here!"

The problem is that rather than face up to the difficulties, we are running away from them. America is tactics to an attack of nostalgia. What has happened is not a disease by definition. But at the moment escapism is in vogue. The old timers lament the passing of the good old days. The kids try to recapture, as Harry Flanders puts it, "a sense of which they never were a part or, worse yet, recapture a era that never existed."

Right now the innocence of the fifties is the "in" thing to remember. But the dangers in which we are all held, but how dearly you hold it. While She No Na is viewed as camp, "Happy Days" recaptures for many people the very essence of the American way of life. Whether the fifties were truly innocent or if it never was is not worth disputing. The problem is look where that innocence has gotten us.

Letters

Tuition

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter in the hopes that some member of the administration cares enough about the students to bother reading TECHNOLOGY NEWS.

I would like to make a suggestion to our administration. How can you justify your decision to increase tuition at the same time you are increasing our library prices? What about the architectural library that IIT must have to keep up its reputation? The way it looks now, we'll only be able to rent it.

Sincerely,

John Doe

S.A.F.T.

Dear Editor,

In reference to the article about the Miami Technology News display case, it has come to my attention that many people by have been most impressed and startled by its curious and fascinating aspect. Therefore, I would like to suggest that we continue to display such items as our library has always been able to provide concerning this matter.

Forum

Dear Editor,

I have a suggestion to make that may improve the scope of your paper. In past years, Technology News had a "Forum" column in which anyone could speak out on issues which were of concern to the students. I am a senior now and I recall that some of the opinions submitted by readers were quite important and helped clear up a lot of controversy.

Sincerely,

Tom Johnson

Most tech students spend a lot of time googling around reproducing their passionate hatred for IIT, and even Cook doesn’t know what to do about that… except to mumble something about lack of leadership! Zapp! Somehow, that takes us to the future. (Don’t ask me, I just work here.)

"When they"'re tortured and scared for 20 years... Then they expect you to pick a career..." - Working-class Hero

Cook views IIT changing very slowly, moving to mere discomfort—distraction. He wants to be careful to ensure that every degree awarded by Tech will be worth something ten years from now. Saying that he will turn himself inside out to help a disenchanted student, he doesn’t hesitate much to overlook risks—his primary objective is to help and guide students—and make damn sure that nobody at sending Tech is wasting his time.

IIT is really oriented—that’s what he told me—and that explains the atmosphere. Tech students seem to be constantly murmuring about “getting out of this damn place.” I was made painfully clear to me when I first came here that there is no room for ideology at IIT. Where will it end? I have to tie the ribbon to this damn screw. The end, the end.

That’s where the imposing comes in—just an exemplary location. It is tricky to work on a high school with drudgery, frustration, and hatred you can’t have ideology without taking some worthless degrees when you finish. And so it goes.

Greg Cook is still interested in sailing. “I think I know more about high-speed sailing than anything else in the world.” Indeed. Well, there’s always sailing.

Buy An Integral

Anyone who wishes to buy an Integral, may do so by sending either Steve Fox or going to the Dean of Students office. The hard cover edition, which contains the introductory pages only, costs $1.00. The soft cover edition, which contains the entire text, costs $1.50. The last day to order these books is Feb. 25, 1963.

Any organization that wishes to be included in Integral should contact Steve Fox at 64th by Feb. 5. A reminder to seniors, please send your picture back to Steve. It is not necessary to buy anything from them All that has to be done is to sign your name on the back of the picture that you want put in the yearbook. If you don’t send your picture back on time, their staff will pick one for inclusion in Integral.

Writing Workshop

The Department of Humanities is establishing a voluntary non-credit writing workshop for undergraduates in the form of a series of stops toward improving student writing at HIF. The workshop, to be conducted by Mr. Robert Bruner, a graduate student in English Literature, will be scheduled at hours which permit the maximum number of participants. No grades will be awarded but when and if a student reaches a satisfactory level of accomplishment, he will be given a certificate of completion. Students interested in participating in the workshop should call the Humanities Department office at X1281 to arrange for an interview.

The Third Day—Electric Light Orchestra (United Artists). ELO's third album attempt is a triumph over a piddling tune. "Oh No, Not Susan," which features a little giddiness. Lynnma's affected vocals take some getting used to.

by Robert Weinberg

A health food store owner goes into the hospital for an ulcer operation. While he is unconscious, complications develop. The man's situation worsens and he becomes delirious. On the other hand, his body is in a state of equilibrium. Two hundred years later the secret is revealed by a group of young physicians who are seeking to understand this phenomenon. "Sounds like a typical science fiction novel!" he would say. Except for one thing: It is written and directed by Woody Allen.

Sleeper is Woody Allen's latest comic adventure, and while it is not his best, it is still better than put out any other comedy of the year. The film is a satire in the same vein as some of Allen's other films, and it has more of a flick. While there are not many gags, Sleeper moves better than most Allen movies.

Everything in the film is well done. There is a good balance between the comedy and the dramatic elements. Allen has the moral with humor. There are only a few moments when the humor seems forced, and there is an overall feeling of unreality in the narrative.

Not the least of the things about the movie is that it is the case with all of Allen's films. You can feel the deep message. Sleeper is a moral to everyone and it does just that. Once it takes place two hundred years in the future, the world is a better place. Much of it is true. It is also true that Allen will never lose his humor. The film is full of laughs. It is a great satire. Allen has the moral with humor. There are only a few moments when the humor seems forced, and there is an overall feeling of unreality in the narrative.

Willard

by Robert Weinberg

Willard had one of the best opening scenes of the year. It's a black and white photo of a cat looking at the camera. It's a great shot. It's a great idea. Willard has a great sense of humor and is a great writer. He has a great sense of style and is a great actor. He has a great sense of humor and is a great writer. He has a great sense of style and is a great actor. He has a great sense of humor and is a great writer. He has a great sense of style and is a great actor.

Side Two opens with more comedy and music. "Hey, Ma, Ma, Where's My Napkin?" is an attempt at rock and roll with a twist of folk music, but it ends up pretty absurd with the odd arrangements and the odder vocals. "Somebody Plays a Mean Guitar" is an attempt at rock and roll with a twist of folk music, but it ends up pretty absurd with the odd arrangements and the odder vocals.

Swimmers Drub

The Hawks started last year's point defense campaign poorly but last Saturday drubbing Lewis by 21 points infaculty pool.

Incredibly, Lewis' swimmers put up in the 12-point first half, but the Hawks put up 26-7, 13-9, 5-2, and 5-0 for the last three quarters. The Hawks defeated the Lancers 51-7.

I.T.'s distances were not far behind but with a bit of a 200 yard time of 1:00.20, which was 1:00.09 faster than the Lancers.

The Hawks are back in action this Saturday against Carriage House, Chicago State U., and Winnebago at Buffaloes.

Superfight Ill

On January 21, Muhammad Ali saw an unanimous 12-round decision over Joe Frazier in one of the most tightly contested matches of the century. Teeters, who, at 242 pounds, was a recent graduate of the University of Illinois, was made to fight a mountain of a man, but he never backed down.

The two fighters came to the bell, they entered at each other like two robots with no feel for the opponent. Frazier took the first right hand and Ali returned it with a left to the jaw. The fighters danced like this for the rest of the fight and it was Ali who emerged the victor.

The fight was held in the stadium at the University of Illinois. The attendance was minimal, but the thrill of the fight made up for it.
