No Solution to Parking Problems Seen

Parking has always been a problem in the IIT lot.

On the first floor of Perkins Hall, at the extreme southwest corner, is a small, uncomfortable furnished office. It belongs to David Dudley, Director of Administration, who is easily one of the most charming men I've ever met.

When Mr. Dudley is in his office, there's about 50 percent of the time he's on the phone, giving him a view of the southeast end of the Tech campus. Down on the ground level, there's not much different from a front-row seat at a hockey game—everything seems bigger than life.

Directly south is Crown Hall, so the west is Siebel. Right across the street is the Pershing Fountain, beyond that, there's the muddy-green‘ R1’ tracks—even the fans lie within sight.

But the most impressive sight of all is the park across the street. The lawn is getting class no more than two minutes that—just so sort of messing with the kids, flushing the windows, taking a chair, talking to David Dudley, and wondering how many times had I passed that office. Never even thinking of peering through those windows, or who might be on the other side.

Dr. Dudley靳 noted that the problem of parking space was a continuing concern and aurranced that the problem was not going to go away.

No solution to parking problems seen

by Michael J. Harrington

To every driver at IIT, he is student, faculty or staff, the status of the parking situation is of major concern. This is especially true for the freshmen in the student parking lots, who have many hazards. The problem of adequate parking space for commuters has also been an increasing concern.

Dr. Dudley noted that the problem of parking in the morning rush hour has been linked to the situation of an airplane flying in a holding pattern waiting for a space to land at an already crowded airport.

Technology News talked to Mr. Ward, Director of Buildings and Grounds, to find out what efforts are being made to solve the problem. Our first question was:

"Why aren't the lots packed, Ward? Wouldn't you like to see all of the parking lots packed but to do so would require the expenditure of hundreds of dollars?" The major expenditure would not be for paying but for constructing sewers. Outdoor ground level parking lots require the construction of sewers for drainage of water.

According to Mr. Ward, the cost of asphalt has skyrocketed and the rest of the asphalt has skyrocketed. Mr. Ward added that the cost of asphalt has skyrocketed.
IIT Not Affected by Slowdown

by Richard R. Anderson

The current slowdown in independent truckers has not affected IIT Yet, but it may in the near future, according to IIT Business Manager Robert Jarrell. Jarrell's office administers the book store, the campus bookstore, the food service, and the student union.

"The truck slowdown has had no effect on us yet," said Jarrell. "We've got plenty of good order in hand, however, so the slowdown lasts longer than two weeks, we could start having shortages," he said.

"The losses to the food service will be the most noticeable, and the student union will be affected. However, the losses will be minor compared to the losses in the book store," he said.

adequately repair the parking lot in the Hub. The budget that has been allocated to repair the parking lot is insufficient to cover the repairs that are necessary. The repairs include, but are not limited to, the repair of the asphalt, the repainting of the lines, and the repair of the lights.

Mr. Wurst said that "If the repair is not done, we will have to make a decision on the future of the parking lot. We will have to consider the possibility of removing the parking lot from the building and either building a new parking lot or using alternative means of transportation." He added that the cost of removing the parking lot is not yet known, but it is estimated to be around $100,000.

The Institute of Design and Crown Hall. In the meantime, we are working to keep up the maintenance of the lot. It is not in good shape. We have been working on the lot since last year and we will continue to work on it until the lot is repaired."

Mr. Wurst said that the lot is in poor condition and that the repairs are necessary. He added that the repairs will be done as soon as the funds are available. He said that the institute will continue to work on the lot until the lot is repaired.

...But a Future

our open positions are for results-oriented engineers in diverse and challenging positions. If you are interested in a career in engineering, sales, plant engineering, or research and development, N. L. Industries wants you to consider joining our team.

Let's meet on campus to discuss career opportunities for you with N. L. Industries.

Our CAMPUS INTERVIEW DATE: FEBRUARY 13 & 14
Graduation Date May Be Moved

After several weeks of discussion, it appears probable that the date of graduation will be moved to May 10. This was mentioned at the Student Assembly meeting, held on Tuesday, by the late President, Mr. James D. Tregear, who believes that there is a 40 percent chance that the date will be changed. However, the final decision will not be made until June, and at the May meeting it was reported that students in close proximity to the graduation day, who had high administrative officials, had held similar objections.

Steve Fox, Senior Class president and member of the General Education Program, has received many letters and phone calls expressing the concern over the change in the graduation date. He was also reported that the Committee, after considering the various options, had decided to retain the traditional May 9 date.

Terry Allan, an 18-year-old senior, said, "I'm really looking forward to the change. I think it will be a lot better for the students and the faculty."

John Fox, a senior at ICTS and member of the General Education Program, was also reported to have expressed concern over the change in the graduation date. He was also reported that the Committee, after considering the various options, had decided to retain the traditional May 9 date.

Student reactions varied. Some students, like Terry Allan, were enthusiastic about the change, while others, like John Fox, were concerned about the practical implications of the change.

Integrals Out May 6 Says Editor Fox

The student newspaper, The Integrals, will be published on May 6, according to the editor, Mr. James D. Tregear. This is a change from the traditional May 9 date for the newspaper.

The Integrals, which is published by the Student Association, has traditionally been published on May 9. However, the editor stated that the decision to change the date was made based on feedback from the students and the faculty.

The change in the publication date is expected to have a positive impact on the students, who will have more time to review the newspaper before the graduation ceremony. The editor also stated that the newspaper will be published in a larger format to accommodate the increased demand.

HEW Report Recommends Sawyer be Reinstated

The HEW report recommending that Mr. James D. Tregear be reinstated has been released. The report states that the evidence presented in favor of Mr. Tregear's reinstatement was sufficient to overcome the charges made against him.

The report also states that the charges were based on insufficient evidence and that the actions taken against Mr. Tregear were unwarranted.

The report was released by the HEW team, which was established to investigate the charges against Mr. Tregear. The team was composed of experts in the field of education and law.

The report has been widely praised by the students and faculty, who believe that the reinstatement of Mr. Tregear is a just decision.

David's... In the Land of the Giants

David's... In the Land of the Giants is a new restaurant that has opened in the heart of the city. The restaurant offers a wide variety of dishes, including seafood, steaks, and vegetarian options.

The restaurant is known for its friendly service and delicious food. The atmosphere is cozy and inviting, with comfortable seating and a warm ambiance.

The restaurant is located at 123 Main Street, and is open daily from 11:00 am to 9:00 pm. Reservations are recommended, especially on weekends.

We are living in the land of phenomenal possibilities. Hamburgers by the billions. Chicken by the ton. Steaks by the carload.

An exception is David's... In the Land of the Giants. A quality-oriented restaurant with delicious food and attentive service.

Richly baked oatmeal raisin cookies. Fine home-made chocolates. Delicious stuffed animals. Excellent imported Russian caviar.

When it comes to fine dining, there's no substitute for the real thing.

We invite you to join us in the Land of the Giants, where the possibilities are endless.
Sex Bias
And Tenure

In the case of SAWYER v. IIT, HEW has ruled: IIT is guilty of sex discrimination. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said that, "IIT discriminated against Dr. Sarah Sawyer in her sex when they denied her tenure." IIT can either comply with the HEW ruling or be reinstated as an Associate Professor, and receive three years back pay, or risk losing federal funding.

The HEW report chronicles the flagrant discrimination perpetrated by IIT against this teacher.

She was paid less than males holding the same rank and position as she did when she taught here.

At time, she was an Assistant Professor released as she was on the "ceiling on tenured positions" pretext.

No females have been offered tenure in her department since 1965 and she has been offered tenure since then.

The first of obvious instances of discrimination against this woman goes on and on.

There is an urgent need for bringing this issue to the fore. Dr. Julie Gordon, an excellent and well liked Humanities teacher, has already been denied tenure at IIT this year.

Several other women faculty members are in line for the treatment that Dr. Sawyer received.

It happens (and it has) that a teacher's department, her colleagues, the American Association of University Professors, other tenured faculty, and the teacher's own students write letters to the administration in her support, then you know that you've got an exceptional teacher.

If it happens (and it has) that the administration chooses to ignore or discount the obvious qualifications of such a teacher, then what are we left with? We are left with one teacher who knows her students, who is known and respected by her students, who taught with a vitality that won the acclaim of her peers. If this is the type of teacher that we cannot do without.

And we the students are the ultimate losers. It is us, not the administration, that suffer the vacuum of hours of boredom, of silence. It is us, not the administration, that must endure the silences and the unspoken things we have to do without.

Dr. Sawyer said that she was "mildly vocal". If a faculty member is mild and is vocal or even or even at all, involving himself with the issues on campus, shall be to his credit.

A university is no more a sterile and empty shell unless the faculty and student body interact, producing creative thought and insight into current issues.

However, IIT's past and current refusal of tenure to "highly recommended" faculty is characteristic of an unspoken attitude toward that is: "to turn our backs on our students instead of scholars".

It is not our intent to slight the present faculty members who are vital parts of their departments. Rather, we hope to point out the flaw in a system that is biased to a dangerous extent. Dangerous to a point that would be ultimately destructive to IIT's future as a viable educational institution.

Letters

More on Small Organiza-
izations

Dear Editor,

Paging through last week's TIN, I noticed several articles about well-known campus organizations. The organizations discussed, A.S.A., C.S.T., etc., include topics for discussion.

However, the editors have neglected to print a letter from the number of little known professional fraternities, sororities, and leagues that would fit into the category of "organized." There is a short article on each organization and the masses of students, who are uninterested in the activities on campus.

Perhaps a few more articles could change some of the titles and include participation.

Sincerely,

Don Alperin

Spud Buds

Dear Grand Spud,

I was entirely overwhelmed by your inspiring letter featured in last week's Technology News. You remind me that the religious content of the Mystic Turner's message would be sufficient to convert even the most hardened atheist, and I am prepared to offer you my application to the New Horizon Fellowship, which would afford you the opportunity to study with me.

Sincerely,

Spud Buds

Campus Police

Dear Editor,

Tuesday night a fraternity brother of mine spilled a man onto the floor from our car in the fraternity parking lot. Although the guy was injured, his injuries were not life-threatening. The campus police were called, and expedited in a very professional manner. They took the necessary steps to ensure the safety of all individuals involved.

Sincerely,

Your most respectfully, Dr. William Baxter Bacson, B.S., in B.B.S., South Asian Institute of Technology.

Walker Holds Accountability Session

by Richard R. Anderson

Protest march. Thes words conjure up visions of sons, daughters, mothers, fathers, and friends. The voices are heard in the streets, a million voices, an endless stream of pain and sorrow. The faces are blurred, the tears are mixed, the anger is raw. The anger is raw.

The words "accountability" and "protest" are often used interchangeably, but they are not synonymous. Accountability is about taking responsibility for one's actions, while protest is about expressing disagreement.

The protest march was not just about the people marching, but about the causes they were fighting for. The causes ranged from civil rights, to environmental issues, to economic justice.

One of the most powerful messages of the march was the call for accountability. People were demanding that those in power be held accountable for their actions, and that the voices of the marginalized be heard.

The protest march was a call to action. It was a reminder that change is possible, and that we must continue to fight for the things we believe in.

In conclusion, the protest march was a powerful event that brought together people from all walks of life to demand accountability and justice. It was a moment of unity, and a call to action.

The idea of checking out the bars on the mini-bus tour began when our editor placed a recent editor's call for ideas in the new mini-bus. "What better way to stimulate interest in the new mini-bus?" we said to each other. After four pitchers of Bud, it sounded like a fine idea.

We immediately began looking for writers to do the story. As one might imagine, an expedition of this sort requires men of courage, stamina, and experience. Articulate men who aren't afraid to walk into an unfriendly tavern, look the bartender in the eye, and mumble, "gimmie a beer."

An exhaustive search turned up three exceptionally qualified derelicts who consoled to do the review. Last Friday, they stomped through six bars, got the hell out as quick as they could, and wrote down as much as they could remember the next day. This is their story.

Our first stop was F's bar, at the corner of 1st and Princeton. The fine door immediately arrested our attention upon noticing a beautiful black candelabrum set on the window. It was then we noticed the mostly stacked boxes of empty beer bottles. A delight to behold.

We sat down at the Real Mahogany bar and ordered a beer each. The bartender, Palm, is a friendly Italian lady. She said she doesn't get many Triton students, and she invited us back.

A special surprise at F's bar was the live entertainment. An old man tried to put his foot in his mouth while another old man sang "Babyface."

The next stop was Sam and Frank's, at 2nd and Wells. Sam and Frank's is a typical neighborhood bar and kind of homely. In fact, we thought the name of the place was Budweiser. One old Italian man was inside playing cards with Sam. Sam and Frank's is not impressive outside, nor is it impressive inside. It's just not impressive. The most interesting things were a stuffed pigeon on the back counter, a glass block bar, and an autographed picture of the Big White Sox at a late fifties' state playing John's Red Sox. We've seen brentner funeral parlers.

Sonny's not real friendly. In fact, we finished our beers in about three minutes flat and got the hell out of there. If you're an old Italian man, it's a nice place, but it's not for most Triton students.

Le Washburn at 3 Deuces.

After leaving Sam and Frank's, we stumbled over to 3 Deuces, at 3rd and Wells. Another shot down a beer place. They have Old Milwaukee signs everywhere, but the only beer they serve is White and Bud in bottles.

The wallpaper looks like old newspaper clippings. The bartender doesn't say much, and wouldn't give her name. The place is only surrounded by friendliness by Sam and Frank's.

The Winery, at 1st and Wells, was next on the itinerary. It is probably the bar frequented by the most Triton students to this world famous for waitresses with super short skirts and high prices (okay, we can understand $27 for a pitcher of Bud). (Some one has to pay for the fancy decor, wine racks, cut glass of course.)

Anyway, we didn't let the cost dull our enjoyment of the scenery. The service is slow, but the waitresses walk around and shake their butts a lot. We left a note:

ART at the corner of 1st and Shoshone is a lovely shot at a bar place, which we understand, is the scene of some pretty good trash once in a while. It had a full of a lot of gawkers, including a half number of young people.

There was a lot to distinguish ART from a lot of other lively neighborhood bars. The best are clean and they empty out of the few places that bars peddler but it's nothing outstanding. Met one there to talk.

Hanging around the bar on the main bar route, we stumbled over to Burger 'n' Bean at 1st and Shoshone. It wouldn't seem like the bar has changed, but we like it so we're on. Bartender Marty is a nice guy even if he doesn't make fun of the crowd.

The attraction at Burger 'n' Bean is not the flashy red bar car, but the real gimp out of the bar. It's the Big Lebowski quarter-pounder hamburgers, and seven rings which don't mean Marty's a pretty fast but he tolerates college students, and that's more than most tavern owners in this area.

Essence vs. Spark

by James R. Mobber

Essence is Essence - Donovan (Spit). This is another helping of candy-coated gau from the master of saccharine himself; "Operating Manual for Spacehip Earth" is a comic-frea-for-all, very nice and refreshing, if a little repetitious. "Lazy Days" also overdoes the repetition bit, but sounds good; "Life Goes On" is a familiar-sounding little song, and "There Is No Them" highlights Donovan's lyrical weaknesses.

This song is a mystery in search of an answer. It is not, as you might assume, a love song. Yet, if you try to make anything more than what it is, namely a pretty melody, to sing to fill up the album "Negation of Man" in the same vein as bathing-beautiful sentiments, Wade Two opens a little better with "Yellow Star", a slightly darker lyric on a catchy Reggae base. The "Dedicated to a Streetcar Named Desire" features the same high background production and "Angie" type whispering. But it doesn't start out now as a very early song, and "Donovan's "I'm so glad" is still a song written with immense sensitivity and observant vocals. What's really striking is how some songs work, how the writer of his song in the essence of profundity and songs it over and over again millions of times. It's a Valentine's Day song, for example, and "Fell in a Riot on Round" shows a whole bunch of already overworked cliches. For a tired listener, we have "Swimming Together", with the King on piano, to which nothing.

The main problem with this song is that it is the same thing that someone, if he was going to be happening to many of the other British pop stars (including Pete Townshend), would be to think that everything he does is some kind of masterpiece, and this results not only in an album full of mediocre hits, but also in the stretching of the few really good songs to such inordinate lengths that they lose most of the dimension they might have had.

"America" is really good. It's a masterwork of aliens and metaphors. "Help!" is a self-contained song about falling in love, and "Peace Man in Paris" is a marvelously-structured love of Crosby-Nash vs. Lynn, Yoko's favored piece of evocative music. "People's Parties" on a Nashville model, "The Same Thing" and "Down in You" are other varied looks at the age old problem of romance. "Bought for Bobery" is the terrific single, a Donnie and "Across the Rock and Roll" is probably the easiest cut to get used to, and "Donovan's best single in years, only he could have done those impossible vocal gymnastics. "Double O'He" is an ode to modern youth, and "Swimming" in the same old song

Some little boys don't.

Some inner-city ghetto have special schools. For little boys who don't talk.

Not mute little boys. But children so withdrawn, so afraid of failure, they cannot make the slightest attempt to do anything at all, they might fail.

Some don't talk. Some don't listen. Mustn't behave. And all of them don't learn.

One day someone asked us to help.

Through Kodak, cameras and film were distributed to teachers. The teachers gave the cameras to the kids and told them to take pictures.

And then the miracle. Little boys who had never said anything looked at the pictures and began to talk. They said, "This is my house." "This is my dog." "This is where I live." They began to explain, to describe, to communicate. And once the channels of communication had been opened, they began to learn.

We're helping the children of the inner city. And we're also helping the adults. We're involved in a National Job Program to train unskilled people in useful jobs.

What does Kodak stand to gain from this? Well, we're showing how our products can help a teacher—and maybe creating a whole new market. And we're also cultivating young customers who will someday buy their own cameras and film. But more than that, we're cultivating alert, educated citizens. Who will someday be responsible for our society.

After all, our business depends on our society. So we care what happens to it.

Basketball: Tied for First!

By Tom Coteury

In its inaugural year, the Chicagoan Collegiate Basketball Conference is witnessing a fantastic struggle for first-place honors. Currently, three teams are tied for the lead, with one not far behind. IIT, Northeastern, and Trinity-Chicago all hold 5-2 conference records, with St. Xavier not far behind at 6-3. The bottom standings are Circle Campus and S. Prairie with 3-5 records and Purdue-Calumet with only 1-6 conference scoring.

Last Wednesday, IIT's basketball squad pulled Purdue-Cabaret deeper into the CCBC river with an 84-75 smack. Torn Skalab and Willie Williams again used their 12 points to balance any defense Skalab scored 24.

Williams at 15, Bob Delaney got 13 and back-up forward Larry Adams added 10 in a meeting extravaganza. Everyone played except Wayne Brown, who left out the game with his injured ankle. In a game characterized by terrible officiating, IIT scored away from Circle Campus's team to win 64-54 last Saturday. Easton picked up fast breaks at both its ends to put down a half, and early outset of 15 points was used. A total of 19 points were called, including two technical fouls against Circle players. Tom Skalab quickly readjusted to the center position and scored 13 points to lead all scorers. Willie Williams again surprised himself, playing with the ball, driving hard to the basket, and continually nailing 20 points in his affix.

Bob Delaney, in the final minutes, a 24-26 leading. Delaney, an off-the-court victory, was the biggest, as he finished with 36 points, ranking third. Jim Gilchrist, a fourth, was nearly a triple-double with his 12 points and 14 assists.

Swimmers Five and Three

On Tuesday night the Hawks travelled to Lake Forest for a basketball game. Fortunately, the whole team was right. They came out with 16 points and 12 assists. IIT's small, angular guards, IIT players were intimidated by their size and were hampered by forcing out-of-bounds fouls. They held their own in the first half, being able to clear the basket for two points and will go into the locker rooms with only a 27-27 deficit. However, IIT came charging out the second half and opened up a big lead. IIT closed the gap to two points, but could not hold on for the last shot in the half to an overtime. The IIT scoreboard clock broke, and the Hawks had no idea how much time was left. Plans are underway for IBC's 83.3 million gym. This is the third time this season their clock has stopped during a game. A new clock should be ordered soon to replace the 36-year-old one they now have.

Old and New Games...

By Tom Coteury

IIT's Hawks Basketball Squad played 4 games in the past 7 days and came out 2 in 2 in the shuffle. The only real game was with Trinity-Chicago last Wednesday night in the CCBC. Williams and Skalab were the high scorers with 12 points each. Left out the game with his injured ankle. Trinery came in at Arthur Rearing Hall with a 1-1 conference record and left 1-2 to tie the game in the CCBC standings with the Hawks. The Hawks played an exceptionally rough game, picking up only 5 fouls in the entire game. Trinity never went in the lead during the entire game. On the other hand, IIT was led 12 times, and crunched in on 7 of 8 free throws more than the margin of victory. Shortly after the second half began, Wayne Brown drove for a layup. He made the shot, but crashed into a Trinity player and came down with his ankle. It was felt to have been broken, but apparently a bad

The IIT Varsity Swim Team seems to be the only team on this season to be on its way to consistent victory. Last week, in a quad meet, IIT beat two of their three opponents, one of the swimmers has left the pool.

In their last meet (early December) win, IIT's divers stood out with a victory over DePaul's best. The entire team was not bad, but was not resolved until the last bell was rung. DePaul won the first and fourth games in the best-of-five series. IIT won the second and third games by more than one hundred points each. However, the games record only showed a 3-3 tie. The 3-3 finish was considered the only way, with IIT ahead by 1200 points of margin. When the tenth frame rolled around, the pressure was on. It was also Silman's last game to fill out and see the end of the season. The IIT men were looking for a win over DePaul's best. IIT had a chance to win.

The men's team will be seen next week against the University of Illinois. If you are unable to attend, contact Coach Edin at Reising Hall or call us at any time prior to the meeting.
